

Berlin Announces Withdrawal from Caucasus Sector

Southern Forces Seeking To Escape Encircle- ment by Reds

Russian Armies Approaching Rostov from Three Fronts

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 8 (AP)—Russia announced that the Red army converging on Rostov to trap the Nazis in the Caucasus was less than seventy-five miles from that bottleneck point today after capturing more than a dozen villages yesterday, and for the first time the Germans acknowledged formally that their southern forces were withdrawing before the massed might of Soviet tanks.

At least five Red army columns were sweeping directly or indirectly toward Rostov, at the mouth of the Don river, while 300 miles below that Caucasian "hinge" the Germans were falling back northward in an apparent effort to escape encirclement.

The regular midnight Soviet communique, as heard by the Soviet Monitor here in a Moscow broadcast, declared thirteen populated points and a railway station had fallen to the advancing Russians yesterday on both sides of the lower Don river. The Reuters Monitor bearing the same communique listed seventeen points, with different spellings in some cases. Although confusion thus existed over details, a study of Russian maps gave this picture:

One Red army column pushing west along the Stalingrad-Likhsaya railway inside the Don bend had taken Valkovo, a rail station 110 miles northwest of Rostov, and only sixty miles from Likhsaya, junction point on the Rostov-Moscow railway. Likhsaya is only about sixteen miles north of Rostov.

Likhsaya also is the goal of another Russian column driving south from the Millerovo area. The column's exact location is not known except that it last was reported within forty miles of Likhsaya after bypassing Millerovo.

Third Army Advancing
A third Red army column is pushing along the Don river's north bank toward Rostov, and yesterday this army took Nikolayev, representing a ten-mile advance in one day. Nikolayev itself is about eighty-seven miles from Rostov. An intermediate point, Zaskersky, about twenty miles south of Valkovo on the railway inside the Don Bend, also was occupied. A fourth Russian column is pushing south from the Millerovo area.

OPA Cracks Down On Poultry Sales

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (AP)—The OPA said today it was cracking down on a "growing black market in poultry sales" in warning ten Chicago wholesale dealers that they had violated ceiling price rules and that new enforcement methods would return thousands of dollars to consumers.

Issuance of warning notices, the OPA announced, was being followed up with arrangements with the dealers to return overcharges to consumers forced to pay higher than ceiling prices.

The agency said inspections showed overcharges in wholesale sales of ducks and geese as high as 3½ cents a pound. In cases where violations were deliberate, the OPA said, triple damages will be insisted upon. In those where violations were caused by oversights or misunderstanding of rules only the amount of the overcharge would have to be returned, OPA said.

Corner Grocer Believes Rationing Of Everything Will Be Necessary

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7 (AP)—Ellis Frieder doesn't pretend to speak for all the grocers in the nation, but as far as he's concerned, the sooner everything is rationed the better.

"The government should stop telling people about rationing beforehand, in the opinion of this proprietor of a corner grocery store. 'If you do, they're going to stock up in spite of anything you can say. They'll be satisfied with whatever you give them if they know they're getting their share, but they're certainly not getting it now,' Frieder commented.

Frieder said his store's supplies had been cut to sixty per cent of former stocks of meat, butter, eggs and other scarce commodities despite the fact that his neighborhood now has five times as many residents.

"I used to sell sixty pounds of butter a week. The last two weeks I got eight pounds, and the week before that, none. Eggs I used to get six, seven, eight cases; now I don't get any."

Stassen Proposes United Nations Of the World with a Single House Of Parliament To Rule after War

HAS POST-WAR PLAN

State Officials Will Co-Operate On Ration Order

Agree To Help Enforce New Regulations; $10,- 000 Fine Possible

[By The Associated Press]
Office of Price Administration officials and state and local police agreed to "complete cooperation" today to enforce the government's new gasoline ration order prohibiting pleasure driving.

Leaders Hold Conference
The agreement was reached at a conference in state OPA headquarters yesterday attended by State OPA Director Leo H. McCormick, Police Commissioner Robert F. Stanton of Baltimore, State Police Superintendent Col. Beverly S. Ober and OPA enforcement attorneys.

McCormick said he had received word of support from many of the state's municipal heads and the promise of full cooperation in enforcing the order.

Will Watch Motorists
He added that individual police departments and law enforcement agencies would plan their own systems of checking motorists, but he suggested that a close watch be kept on amusement and sporting centers and parking lots.

McCormick asserted that violators of A, B and C ration book restrictions would be tried before the same group of attorneys recommended by the Maryland Bar Association to hear violations of previous regulations.

Boards Get Order
The state OPA director said he had forwarded an order to rationing boards in defense areas asking officials to check on all C coupons and to allow the holders only for home-to-work transportation.

State OPA enforcement Attorney C. P. Mundy said in Baltimore that it was expected the use of gasoline for pleasure purposes would be made a federal criminal offense, but added "we do not plan to prosecute motorists on this basis unless it is absolutely necessary."

The terms of the law establishing the OPA, Mundy declared, make violations of OPA regulations federal misdemeanors, punishable by a fine of $10,000 or one year in jail.

"We hope and expect that public cooperation will do the largest part of our job," Oppenheimer said.

Whiskey Shipment Stolen

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7 (AP)—Whiskey valued today at between $3,000 and $4,000 and a truck appraised at $750 were reported stolen last night from a liquor company.

"On a week-end I used to get ten loins of pork from one wholesaler, and now I'm cut to two or three, and they're gone before the store hardly opens. What kind of a sixty per cent is that?"

Salesmen who used to pester him now don't bother to come around, Frieder said.

Coffee and sugar rationing was a godsend to the grocer and to his customers, he reported.

"When they announced the rationing of coffee, I had 300 pounds. In three days I had none. Now I get all the coffee I want, and the customer gets all she needs. 'And I don't have to buy from the wholesaler things I don't need—old stuff they haven't been able to sell in years—in order for him to favor me with coffee.'"

In Frieder's opinion, the runs on coffee and sugar should have taught the government a lesson that would bring immediate rationing of everything and, incidentally, surcease to at least one bewildered groceryman.

Governor of Minnesota Offers New Plan for an Enduring Peace

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 7 (AP)—Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, recommending immediate planning for post-war world cooperation, tonight proposed establishment of a United Nations of the world with a single House of Parliament as the key governmental device.

"We now have a world-wide vision to win the war," he declared. "We must keep our sights high and maintain a world wide vision to win an enduring people's peace."

"America, peopled by the sons and daughters of every nation in the world, living and working side by side in the forty eight different states, can and must furnish leadership in meeting this challenge."

Serving Third Term
Governor Stassen, a Republican, who was inaugurated for his third term, spoke at a joint meeting of the St. Paul and Minneapolis branches of the Foreign Policy Association at the University of Minnesota.

Emphasizing that winning the war must come first, Stassen said he was presenting his suggestions in the hope they would stimulate search for and discussion of the best answers to the problem.

"It is my proposal," he said, "that we should contemplate, and begin to plan now, for a definite continuing organization of the United Nations of the world. China, Russia, the British commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America, and all of the smaller United Nations should participate in this governmental structure."

United Nations Council
He suggested that the Parliament, in which the various nations would be represented on the basis of their literate population and their contributions to the expense of the joint government, could function in seven major categories. A member of the Parliament would direct each, and the seven would make up a council which would function as the United Nations council or the executive side of the United Nations government.

Two of the major functions Governor Stassen listed for the world parliament would be establishment of a world code of justice with a United Nations court to administer it and a United Nations legion to enforce the code, "insure the continued disarmament of the Axis nations and of outlaw areas" and support administration of other acts of the Parliament.

Building and Loan
Bill Presented to
New Legislature

One of Hottest Fights of the Session May Be in Offing

By C. P. ZURLINDEN
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 7 (AP)—House bill No. 98—one of the last legislative proposals introduced in the House of Delegates during today's first real General Assembly business session—promises to become the center of the 1943 legislature's first real controversy.

Providing for a building and loan board, the bill proposes an effective policing of the state's building and loan associations, with its supporters asserting, the intention of putting them on a sound financial basis throughout.

If it survives and is enacted, Maryland would join the other forty-seven states in providing "checks" against unsound building and loan corporations, for at present the free state is the only commonwealth in the nation without a building and loan law.

Hot Struggle Likely
Shortly after the bill was introduced, the lower House buzzed with an excitement born of anticipation of the expected struggle for its passage when legislative councilmen apply the pressure.

Veteran lawmakers recall the 1941 building and loan bill, which was pigeon-holed in the committee room and never came to the floor for debate.

Under the provisions of the 1943 proposal, tight restrictions would be imposed against the state's much-criticized laxity in regard to building and loan companies.

Ask Three-Man Board
It designates a three-man building and loan board composed of men engaged actively in that field. They would be non-salaried members, all appointed by the governor.

Director of the state building and loan program would be a supervisor, likewise selected by the governor from a list of five names submitted by board members. The supervisor would receive $5,000 annually, serve indefinitely and be responsible to the board.

Roosevelt Sees Important Gains In Present Year

President Demands Per- manent Disarmament of Axis after the War

Tells Congress United Na- tions Can and Must Remain United

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP)—To the stormy applause of the Seventy-eighth Congress, President Roosevelt predicted today that 1943 would see a "very substantial advance along the roads that lead to Rome, Berlin and Tokyo," and demanded the permanent disarmament of the Axis nations after the war is won.

"The United Nations 'can and must remain united' to enforce that disarmament," he said, and to help achieve a degree of world economic stability that will make freedom from want a fact. In this effort the United States must participate fully, he implied, for "we cannot make an America an island in either a military or economic sense."

Jobs after the War
With vigor, he "dissented" from the view that war time is no time for a discussion of domestic reforms. In very general terms he called for an expansion of the social security system and for planning that will give our fighting men permanent employment, when the armed forces of this nation are demobilized.

Mr. Roosevelt delivered his annual message on the "state of the union" in person before a joint session of the House and Senate, before a glittering assemblage of big names, cabinet members and the diplomats of the Allied nations.

Reports on World Affairs
It developed, however, into a report on the state of the world; on the status of the Allied cause, which he found encouraging; and on American war production, which he found excellent — "the arsenal of democracy is making good," he said. To all this he added a guarded prediction that this Congress may have "the historic privilege" of making the peace.

It was a conciliatory message, one that stressed the victory objectives and accomplishments, upon which all are united, and avoided specific recommendations for domestic legislation which would stir up factional disputes.

"The Axis powers knew that they must win the war in 1942 — or eventually lose everything," he said. "I do not need to tell you that our enemies did not win the war in 1942."

Praises Russians
He praised the Russians for their defense of Stalingrad and their present offensives. In the Pacific the battle of Midway was the most important victory, he said, for it secured to the United Nations communication lines stretching far "in every direction."

"The period of our defensive attrition in the Pacific is passing," he said. "Now our aim is to force the Japanese to fight. Last year we stopped them. This year we advance and fight."

The ultimate outcome, he said, is a mathematical certainty — "that will become evident to the Japanese people themselves when we strike at their home islands, and bomb them constantly from the air."

In these attacks, he asserted, we shall be "closely joined with the heroic people of China." Even today, he added to the amazement of many, more material is being delivered in China by airplane than ever was carried over the famous Burma Road.

Warning to Axis
"I cannot tell you whether we are going to hit them in Norway, or through the low countries, or in France, or through Sardinia, or Sicily, or through the Balkans, or through Poland — or at several points simultaneously. But I can tell you that no matter where and when we strike by land, we and the

JAP SHIP USED AS SUPPLY BASE

After Allied troops had cleaned out the Japs in Gons village in New Guinea they learned that the enemy had cleverly put to use this beached transport which had been badly damaged by MacArthur's bombers some time before. Fast destroyers, it was said, pulled alongside the vessel at night and placed needed supplies aboard her. The hemmed-in Nipponese then brought them ashore in small boats.

BRITISH DRIVEN FROM HEIGHT COMMANDING ROAD TO MATEUR

First Army Veterans Lost All They Gained in Attack On Germans in the Jebel Azzag Sector

By WES GALLAGHER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS in NORTH AFRICA, Jan. 7. (AP)—British First Army veterans have been driven from the dominating Jebel Azzag height commanding a road to Mateur, fifteen miles to the east, after capturing and holding the position for a day, an Allied communique said today.

A lull in recent heavy rains allowed the British to attack Tuesday. The Germans counter-attacked successfully yesterday, regaining all the ground they had lost. Mateur is twenty miles southeast of Bizerte, the naval base which is a prime goal of the British, American and French Allies.

(The British Eighth army in Libya remained virtually motionless before the fortified German position in the Wadi Zem-Zem, about 180 airline miles east of Tripoli. Air activity increased slightly and patrols were active. Eighth army bombers started railway and waterfront fires at Sousse on the Tunisian east coast, a Cairo communique said. The Italians said a fighting French column of superior force was exerting pressure on Fascist garrisons in the Sahara desert in South Libya.)

German parachutists and a native guide were dropped far behind the Allied line in the Saint Arnando region, 100 to 160 miles west of the Tunisian frontier. The guide was captured and shot.

U. S. bombers raided Kairouan, seventy-five miles south of Tunis and thirty miles west of Sousse, three times yesterday in support of Gen. Henri Giraud's French forces operating in that region. The French apparently are attempting to reach the east coast of Tunisia to sever Axis communications with Tripoli in Libya.

A spokesman of the U. S. twelfth air force said Boston bombers attacked German troops concentrations twice near Kairouan yesterday and that B-25 Billy Mitchells bombed railway yards. Lightnings and Warhawks escorted each mission and no American plane was lost.

An American Spitfire squadron with the RAF on a forward fighter field—operating as a part of the Twelfth air force—was said to have had a "red-letter day" recently when they destroyed four of seven German aircraft during a heavy attack on the forward area.

An RAF spokesman said the squadron under the command of Maj. James Coward of Natchitoches, La., one of the first American fliers to be promoted in the field during the campaign, deserved high praise.

Quotes Rep. Martin
The Washington Post this morning carried an article by the Washington bureau of the Chicago Sun quoting Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, House Republican leader, as saying that some colleagues had told him of these reports.

Martin said today that he expected a move to be made soon to investigate Hopkins' public and private activities but that he was not at liberty to disclose the nature of the activities to be questioned or the identity of those who would seek the investigation.

"It's All Nonsense," Beaverbrook Says

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP)—"It is all nonsense," Lord Beaverbrook declared tonight in commenting upon published reports that Republican congressmen in the United States planned to investigate a reputed gift by him of $500,000 worth of emerald jewelry to Mrs. Harry L. Hopkins.

"The story," Beaverbrook added, "is all fabrication from first to last but the Germans will like it."

Complete Destruction Of Force of 15,000 Is Predicted by MacArthur

Last Strong Point in New Guinea Doomed; Jap Trans- ports and Warships Attacked in Huon Gulf; Heavily Loaded Troop Ship Sunk with All on Board; 18 Enemy Fighter Planes Shot Down

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Friday, Jan. 8 (AP)—The last strong point of the Japs in the Papua peninsula of New Guinea has been enveloped at Cape Sanananda, bringing near the complete destruction of the enemy's Papuan army, once 15,000 strong, General Douglas MacArthur reported today.

This was announced in the noon communique which also reported the destruction of two Jap transports and eighteen Zero planes off New Guinea.

Gas and Fuel Oil Rationing To Be Made Effective

Government Plans Strict Enforcement of Drastic Regulations

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—The United States government moved today to keep the home fires burning—but at a cost of prohibiting pleasure motoring and perhaps otherwise drastically altering the pattern of civilian life in seventeen Atlantic seaboard states.

Oil-heated schools, theaters and even churches faced closing or at least curtailing their operations along with non-essential businesses and industrial plants. There just wasn't enough fuel oil to go around, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said, and such establishments were cut to forty-five per cent of their normal supply.

Heat for homes would be the first consideration, the OPA announced, thus providing one warm glow in a chilly picture. Another was word that the shortage did not extend to the coal supply, and was not expected to this winter.

Rules Fun Out
But if that thought caused a motorist to smile, he did it carefully behind his sleeve. Banning pleasure driving at noon today, the OPA said the best test was "if it's fun it's out."

It classed as "fun" motoring to places of amusement or recreation, social calls, sightseeing and vacation tours.

Driving permitted under the ban included trips for essential shopping, to attend church services, to obtain medical attention of attend funerals, to meet an emergency involving threat to life, health or property, and driving for occupational and family or personal necessity.

State and local law enforcement agencies immediately stepped in, at OPA request, to make the man effective.

Burden on Motorists
Henderson chose the "pleasure driving" ban rather than a further cut in the value of "A" ration coupons, which are now good for only three gallons in the seaboard area. Any person disobeying the order faces cancellation of all or part of his gasoline ration, OPA said, adding that the burden was on the motorist to prove his driving essential.

Bituminous Operators and Miners Resume Talks over Six Day Week

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP)—Bituminous operators and the United Mine Workers, under pressure of government officials to agree on terms for operating the mines six days a week, resumed negotiations today.

One source said progress had been made, though not definite enough to announce in detail. Another meeting will be held tomorrow.

Both the northern and southern operators were represented at the conferences, but they maintained their separate group identities.

Negotiations became deadlocked several weeks ago over the question whether the six days of work should be brought under the terms of the existing contract with respect to penalties, such as discharge and fines, for absenteeism. The miners have insisted that the basic five day week should be preserved contractually and that the individual has the right to refrain from working on the sixth day without penalty. The operators have contended they would not have control of mine operations under those conditions. Both sides have agreed upon payment of time and a half rates for the sixth day, the War Labor Board having decided that such an agreement did not constitute a wage increase requiring its approval. Increases and maximum prices will be necessary to finance payment for the sixth day at premium rates. Operators have been assured that the new ceilings will be permitted when complete agreement with the miners has been reached.

Meanwhile, a meeting of the committee of twelve was called for Philadelphia tomorrow to discuss the outbreak of strikes in the anthracite region. The committee is made up of six representatives of the United Mine Workers and six operators.

Simpson Doubts Japanese Plan New Expedition

Sees Too Tough Going for Enemy To Attack Guadalcanal

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

If a monster Japanese amphibious expedition against New Guinea, Guadalcanal or some other point is assembling, as Australian reports have it, it is doing so under trying conditions.

Rabaul, in New Britain, is said to be the nerve center of the enemy mobilization, although shipping for the expedition is reported widely dispersed to avoid air detection. Within a few hours after publication of the report in Australia, MacArthur's bombers were on the job over Rabaul for the sixth time in thirty days. They bagged an estimated 50,000 tons of Japanese troops and cargo space and brought to twenty-one the number of ships sunk or wrecked in that area in the half dozen bomber sweeps.

Japs Closely Watched

That does not necessarily forbid a new Japanese effort to retrieve lost ground or strengthen defensive outposts on the Solomons-New Guinea-Timor perimeter. However, it stoutly supports Secretary Knox's statement that Japanese doings in the Rabaul area are being scouted regularly by the Americans.

The logic of the situation for the Japanese points primarily toward defensive rather than offensive maneuvering in the southwest Pacific. The Allied threat against that vulnerable corner of the Japanese conquest sphere is real and growing.

Jap Losses Heavy

It is written in the Pacific attrition figures which President Roosevelt so sharply emphasized to the new Congress in his hopeful review of the war on all fronts. Naval, cargo and, above all, air losses of the Japanese since Pearl Harbor warrant Mr. Roosevelt's dictum that "the period of our defensive attrition in the Pacific is passing."

The time, the place and the method of the Allied advance against Japan are unpredictable for the same reasons that prompted presidential refusal to predict the nature or direction of projected Allied advances across the Mediterranean or the North Sea against the Axis in Europe. Military necessity, if nothing else, would bar such disclosures.

Washington County Teachers Join WAACS

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Jan. 7 (AP)—The Washington county board of education will lose three public school teachers and one clerk to the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps.

The teachers, who expect to leave shortly on assignments for the WAACS, are Miss Martha Schenckel, Miss Mary Beard and Miss Julia Over. Mrs. Helen Wolfkill, assistant clerk at the board offices, is the other recruit.

Roosevelt Sees

British and the Russians will hit them from the air heavily and relentlessly. Day in and day out we shall heap tons upon tons of explosives on their war factories and utilities and seaports.

"Hitler and Mussolini will understand the enormity of their miscalculations—that the Axis would always have the advantage of superior air-power as they did when they bombed Warsaw, Rotterdam, London and Coventry. That superiority has gone—forever."

Production Figures

He gave these 1942 production figures:
Combat vehicles—56,000.
Machine guns—670,000.
Anti-tank guns—21,000.
Small arms ammunition—10-250,000,000 rounds.
Artillery ammunition 181,000,000 rounds.

"These facts and figures," he added grimly, "will give no aid and comfort to the enemy."

There had been criticism of the production effort, he said—some of it "based on guesswork and even on malicious falsification of fact"—but on the whole the criticism had "spurred us on" and "reflected a normal American impatience to get on with the job."

Must Disarm Axis

Economy security, freedom from want and fear, cannot be attained unless there is assurance of lasting peace, he argued.

"It is clear to us," he said, "that if Germany and Italy and Japan—or any one of them—remain armed at the end of this war, or are permitted to rearm, they will again, and inevitably, embark upon an ambitious career of world conquest. They must be disarmed and kept disarmed, and they must abandon the philosophy, and the teaching of that philosophy, which has brought so much suffering to the world."

"A tremendous, costly, long-enduring task in peace as well as in war is still ahead of us."

"But, as we face that continuing task, we may know that the state of this nation is good—the heart of this nation is sound—the spirit of this nation is strong—the faith of this nation is eternal."

Town Clerk Enlists

SEAT PLEASANT, Md., Jan. 7 (AP)—George W. Fowler resigned from his office as town clerk and treasury to enter the armed forces.

Former Councilman J. Theodore Crown was named to succeed him.

GENERAL BIDS GODSPEED TO MEN

Congressmen Praise and Criticize Roosevelt's Speech to Lawmakers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP)—Congressmen of widely divergent views—Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) and Senator Austin (R-Vt.), Rep. Fish (R-N.Y.) and Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R-Conn.)—all found something to commend in President Roosevelt's message today.

But among the 500-odd lawmakers to whom it was addressed there were some who found points to criticize as well, and some who disagreed among themselves over the address.

Said Rep. Miller (R-Neb.), a new member, "I was disappointed. I expected him to say something about unity between the two houses of Congress. There was nothing constructive, only a defense of what he had done. Furthermore, it looks like they're going to continue certain New Deal policies such as taking care of everybody without having to work."

And Rep. Jensen (R-Ia.): "It was a fighting speech and should promote unity in the country. He didn't take any crack at the Republicans, in my opinion, although some of the fellows think he did."

Speaker Rayburn: "I think it was a splendid report to Congress and to the nation on the state of the union."

House Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts — "A great message from one of the outstanding men in the world's history—a message of confidence for victory and a message of hope for the future. Without regard to race, creed or color, every American can thank God that in this crisis we have President Roosevelt for our leader."

On Foreign Affairs, Senator Austin called it "a fine, strong speech, well calculated to unite the people in the winning of the war and establish the foundations of a sound peace." Wheeler commented that "it was a very clever speech. It dealt entirely with generalities with which every right thinking person could agree."

Mrs. Luce Surprised

Mrs. Luce, saying that "with many of the noble generalities of the president's speech everyone must agree," expressed principal interest in the "most surprising statement" that more lend-lease material now is being flown into China than traversed the Burma Road.

"It means either that we have put many transport planes into India for the China hop," she explained, "or there was much less going in over the Burma Road than we knew."

Fish commented that "the speech was a fine presentation of the activities of our armed forces and the productive capacity of America. Everyone, regardless of party, will endeavor to help win the war and seek lasting peace. But the Congress will have to wait for more details regarding freedom from fear and want."

Other comment:
Senator Nye (R-ND): "It's one of the president's most encouraging messages that he has delivered."

Senator Johnson (D-Colo.): "A restrained, conservative and realistic appraisal of the military situation."

Senator Hill (D-Ala.): "A magnificent speech that will ring around the world."

Sen. Capper Pleased
Senator Capper (R-Kas.): "A great war speech. His production report was encouraging."

Senator Thomas (R-Idaho): "His summary of the war progress was very fine and I think must have been gratifying to the American people. I didn't agree with his dream of social security. It is fantastic in many respects and impossible."

Representative Voorhis (D-Calif.): "I was glad to have him indicate a belief that the war must be followed by establishment of a lasting peace and that such a peace, in turn, depends directly upon the achievement of full employment of people, within the framework of a free economy."

Representative Plumley (R-Vt.): "Compared with messages of other war presidents it was unsatisfactory and to my mind a weak effort as a state document and an attempted alibi for the economic deficiencies of the New Deal. It was very evident there was a lack of enthusiasm over the speech, as corroborated by the reaction of the House and gallery."

Md. Legislature Adjourns until 8 P. M. Monday

Leaders Ignore O'Connor's Suggestion They "Pitch Right in"

By JOHN F. CHANDLER

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 7 (AP)—Administration plans for a "jack-rabbit" start in getting the 1943 legislature under way ran into a snag today when Senate and House leaders kicked over the traces and adjourned until Monday night at 8 o'clock.

Governor O'Connor many times in recent months had expressed the hope that the new legislature, facing the serious business of drafting laws in time of national peril, would pitch right in the first day and stay on the job until the work was done.

200 Bills Presented

Both houses met shortly after noon today and were engulfed with more than 200 bills, then adjourned when it was declared that to convene tomorrow would be "a mere sham" because little could be accomplished until the bills were printed.

It was understood the governor had requested sessions tomorrow.

One hundred bills, all drafted by the Legislative Council, were dropped into the Senate hopper, and 100 council bills and five individual bills were introduced in the House.

Six committees were appointed: the finance and judicial proceedings committees in the Senate and the Ways and Means, Rules, Judiciary, and Insurance and Loans committees in the House.

"I am going to run this part of the legislature the way legislatures should be run," Senate President Arthur H. Brice (D-Kent) remarked after the Senate adjourned at 1:30 p. m.

Brice Justifies Delay

He said that to conduct any Senate sessions before Monday night when the bills will be ready, would be "just for show, and I'm not running a show this year."

The House didn't convene until 1:35 p. m. when Speaker Thomas E. Conlon read the Senate's Monday adjournment message, which was quickly adopted.

Delegate John S. White (D-Prince George's), majority floor leader, explained he was "mindful of the fact" that legislators now were being paid $1,000 per year instead of $5 per day as in past sessions.

He said this was done so that legislators could afford to concentrate on their work, but, he added, "there is very little we could accomplish by meeting here tomorrow."

Due to transportation and gasoline uncertainties and plans of many lawmakers to leave for their homes tonight, White said he felt the adjournment should be adopted.

The Senate and House must agree if either body desires to adjourn for more than three days. Conlon said the House had intended to meet tomorrow but would adjourn "out of a spirit of co-operation" with the Senate. He said the Senate requested the adjournment.

Building and Loan Bill

One of the House bills introduced would set up a building and loan board to regulate this business in Maryland, and legislators immediately predicted a stiff battle when it hits the floor for debate.

Legislative council members said Maryland was the only state in the union that did not have any control over building and loan companies.

The House also got a measure proposing a forty-mile an hour highway speed limit, in contrast to the thirty-five-mile "Victory" speed urged by President Roosevelt and by Governor O'Connor.

Dick Wants More Speed

J. Milton Dick (R-Allegany), House Republican floor leader, explained that "proper investigation" had shown that mechanism of most modern cars and trucks allowed more economical gasoline operation at forty than thirty-five miles.

He said legislative council members agreed, when told that many mechanics and truck men recommended the forty-mile limit, to endorse the bill.

"I believe that if federal officials had made proper investigation, they would have set the forty-mile limit instead of thirty-five miles."

A bill proposing to create a "game and inland fish commission" repealing the "water fowl-birds and game law" was introduced in the Senate. The measure was suggested by the state forester, and provides for a five-member commission appointed by the governor.

May Repeal Voting Act

The Senate also received a bill that would repeal the declarations of intentions act, a subject of much discussion and wrangling in past sessions when other repealers were proposed.

Maryland is the only state having such an election law, which requires persons coming to Maryland to declare their intention to become a citizen one year before they may register to vote.

Other Senate Bills Included:

A state-wide tax sales law, repealing all county and Baltimore city laws relating to sale of property for non-payment of taxes. At present, every county and Baltimore city makes its own tax sale provisions.

Creation of chronic diseases hospitals and infirmaries to replace almshouses. It was explained by legislators that passage of the bill would set up the necessary legal machinery to go ahead when funds were provided for their construction. There would be at least one hospital on the Eastern Shore, and one on the Western Shore.

Prisoners May Work

Permitting working of state prisoners under guard on farms during the war emergency to help solve the farm labor shortage.

A state-wide weights and measures department, excepting of Baltimore city which has its own act. Legislators explained that outside of Baltimore "very few" weights and measures are now being inspected. For instance, one source reported that detective gasoline station pumping equipment which failed to pass Baltimore inspection had been sent out by one company into counties where no inspection was required.

Continuous assessment of property in all counties. Baltimore city and Frederick county are the only places having such a law. In others, assessments are made every five years, and legislators said assessments were bound to be in error under inexperienced assessors. The bill was recommended by the State Tax Commission.

J. Howard Johnson (D-Wicomico) offered a House resolution requesting the State Roads Commission to grant free passage over state-owned toll bridges and ferries to pedestrians in armed forces.

"This is the least we could do for them," he said, adding that he had the governor's approval of the proposal.

Floor Leader White, however, suggested that the resolution be referred to the ways and means committee, which could confer with the roads commission to determine whether this would upset its financial obligations.

White said that "there is no doubt we all agree we would support this, but there also may be some question as to the resolution's constitutionality."

Baltimore To Give Vaudeville New Trial

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7 (AP)—The same gilded cupids that gazed down upon such stars as Leon Errol and Coloratura Adeline Patiti will be right there for the benefit of those who love "the good old days"—when the once renowned Maryland theater opens to vaudeville once more Jan. 15.

The word was passed around today and there was more than one anticipatory grin on the faces of those who once watched the headline acts of vaudeville and the stars of stage and screen do their bit.

The forty-two-year-old theatre, which catered to vaudeville until 1927 and then went wholeheartedly for the legitimate stage, now will return to its first love—vaudeville. With movies, too.

Roosevelt Speech Pleases British

LONDON, Jan. 7 (AP)—British government circles tonight declared unofficially that President Roosevelt's speech to Congress today was one of his best and the British generally cheered the address, which was heard clearly throughout Britain on the BBC radio relay.

Barkley Given Confidence Vote At Party Caucus

Threatened To Resign if Stripped of Part of Powers

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP)—Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky won a 34 to 20 vote of confidence tonight from the Senate Democratic caucus after he had threatened to resign his leadership if the conference voted to strip him of power to appoint members of the important steering committee.

Barkley, who previously had been re-elected leader unanimously on motion of Senator Clark (D-Mo.), was reported to have told his fellow party members he would consider it a slap at his leadership calling for his resignation if the appointive power were taken away from him and the caucus filled vacancies on the steering group.

Old Friends Reunited

Senator McKellar (D-Tenn.), friend and strong supporter of Barkley until a few months ago when the majority leader forced McKellar's arrest to compel his attendance during a filibuster, moved to fill two steering committee vacancies by caucus action.

This motion, which would have broken a long precedent, was reported to have been supported by senators who have been critical of the administration policies. It was rejected by a thirty-four to twenty vote and the caucus then adopted unanimously a resolution by Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) authorizing Barkley to fill the vacancies.

The majority leader told reporters after the close conference broke up that Senator George (D-Ga.) had proposed a resolution, to the adoption of which Barkley had agreed, expressing the view that the steering committee ought to be called into session from "time to time" to discuss policies and shape the course of legislation. Some members had complained that the steering committee seldom met and that Barkley assumed most of the responsibility for deciding what legislation would be taken up.

No Sergeant at Arms

The caucus delayed for two weeks action on the election of a sergeant at arms, instructing Barkley to appoint a nominating committee of five to make recommendations. Senator Connally (D-Tex.) had nominated Chesley W. Jurney, the present sergeant at arms for re-election, but Senator McKellar had proposed the name of Wall Doxey of Mississippi, defeated for re-election to the Senate in last year's primary vote.

The caucus elected Senator Maloney (D-Conn.) as its secretary, replacing former Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma, who was defeated and Maloney thus became a member of the steering committee. The group re-elected Senator Hill (D-Ala.) as

Dr. George Crile Dies at Age 78

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7 (AP)—Dr. George Crile, famed 78-year-old surgeon-scientist who believed he performed the first direct blood transfusion, died today after receiving twenty-five of them in recent weeks.

Subacute bacterial endocarditis, a growth of germs which blocked the heart valves, caused death shortly after 9 a. m. Eastern War Time. His physician, Dr. Charles Hartsock, added that Dr. Crile had been confined to Cleveland clinic since Nov. 11, more than a month longer than was known previously.

Two Car Garage Reported Stolen

CHICAGO, Jan. 7 (AP)—The police started out today on a hunt for a stolen two-car garage.

The known facts in the mystery were these: That the garage was in its proper place on Dec. 29. It was gone when a carpenter went out to do some work on it Dec. 30. Nobody saw it disappear. It's still missing. The property manager, convinced it would not be returned voluntarily, asked the police to find it and bring it back.

15,000 Miners Now on Strike Over New Dues

Anthracite Men Refuse To Return as Urged by John L. Lewis

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 7 (AP)—The number of striking miners in Pennsylvania's anthracite fields—sole source of the nation's hard coal—rose to nearly 15,000 today in the face of demands from UMW Chief John L. Lewis, Secretary Ickes, and other government and union officials that the men go back to work.

The strike, unauthorized by the United Mine Workers of America, was called in protest against a fifty-cent a month dues increase adopted by a UMW convention last October at which the strikers say anthracite miners were not properly represented. The strikers also are demanding a $2-a-day pay increase.

Production Slumps

State officials said production down already because of short work-weeks during the holiday season, had dropped at least 30,000 tons daily at the thirteen effected collieries. Mark James, Pennsylvania secretary of commerce, said a "great shortage" was reported in New England, part of the seven-teen-state area in which a twenty-five per cent cut in fuel oil rations for non-residential buildings went into effect almost simultaneously with the strike.

Ickes telegraphed Lewis and Maj. W. W. Inglis, president of the Glen Alden Coal Company, one of the industry's largest producers that "I feel it incumbent upon me to request that you immediately convene the anthracite committee of twelve and develop plans for prompt resumption of work."

The committee administers the contract between the groups.

Will Hear Protests

The UMW president did not mention the dues increase but Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy said last night that protests would be heard by the executive committee as soon as the six-day week recommended by the government to spur production goes into effect. Lewis did say, however, that a pay increase would not be granted in view of a time and a half provision in the proposal for a longer work-week. UMW officials have told the miners that a wage increase cannot be granted without reopening contract negotiations in which, they said, would not be feasible in view of wartime conditions.

'Nothing Times Nothing' Rejected As Art

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—The argument of modernism versus classicism in art circles is getting to be an old battle. It has been fought up and down the sedate halls of the National School of Fine Arts here, but a recent eruption was too much for the august directorate.

A statue of something, colored with every shade of the rainbow, was exhibited. Asked for an explanation, student sponsors replied:

"This is nothing times nothing. It is only to attract attention, as means of propaganda for our student magazine. But it's art."

"No!" shuddered the conservative directors, ordering the something canvas shrouded until workmen could cart it away.

More People Rush To Get the Birdie

NEW YORK (AP)—More people are getting the "birdie" now than ever, say New York photographers who are experiencing a great boom. It's due to the war, they say—mothers and sweethearts are posing for pictures to be sent to the armed forces, and men in the forces want the folks back home to see how they look in uniform.

State Economy Not Altogether By-passed

APPARENTLY, the General Assembly is going to have very little help from Governor O'Connor in the obvious task of cutting out nonessential state expenditures and otherwise effecting drastic economies, long needed, in order to make possible a really substantial reduction of the income and personal taxes. A search of the text of the governor's message to the Assembly fails to reveal any insistence, or specific recommendations, for such economies, further than a pointing with pride here and there to alleged savings in various departments, all of which, however, appear to be continuing with all their pre-war scope and activities. It is regrettable, indeed, that the chief executive did not see fit to formulate some suggestions in this respect, particularly in view of the dire necessity thereof.

The Republican members of the Assembly, however, have sensed this necessity and in urging energetic efforts, wherever possible, to cut down state expenses and appropriations, pointed out, in their program of policy adopted in their caucus, definite ways and means whereby the economies might be achieved. Examination of these specific recommendations is timely.

"It is proposed," the program stated, "that a bi-partisan commission be named by the General Assembly and empowered to make a complete survey of the present administration for the following purposes: 'The elimination of all unnecessary employees appointed by the state administration.' [The word 'appointed' carries especial significance.]

"The cutting down or elimination of all unneeded appropriations, expenditures and taxes.

"An investigation of the State Roads department to ascertain why—unless due entirely to labor shortages—practically no roads have been built during this administration and, according to the chairman of the commission, none proposed for the next three years; also the present repository or disposition of the respective shares of the state and federal governments for the completion of the Frederick and Hagerstown road.

"The ascertainment and publication of the names, addresses and remuneration of all persons employed by the governor to guard certain places or structures in the alleged interest of defense."

The reference to the investigation of the State Roads department has to do with the loss of federal funds, for one thing, and with the growing cost to the state by neglect of pressing road requirements, which, if continued, would in the long run be subversive of real economy.

In fact, a special paragraph was devoted to this subject. "We advocate," it stated, "the building by the State Roads commission of roads adequate to the war effort and the present emergency, and the abandonment of a policy which has resulted in the loss of federal aid to our state road system in the building of necessary roads and bridges. Subject to necessary priorities affecting war materials, we recommend the carrying out of plans of the previous Republican State Roads commission submitted to and approved by the 1939 legislature. We also advocate the building and maintaining by the commission of bridges in certain counties which tie into and are needed for the efficient use of the state road system in their respective localities."

Adequate maintenance of roads, it seems almost unnecessary to state, is a piece of real economy for the simple reason that their continued disintegration will eventually cause an enormous unnecessary cost.

These recommendations should receive the earnest consideration of the General Assembly, even though the administration has nothing to say on the subject and does little or nothing toward effecting the economies which the wartime situation so imperatively demands. The Democratic members might do well to co-operate with the Republican members in any efforts they may exert to this end. The committee suggested is something in the nature of the Byrd committee of Congress, and there is no question that its purposes and results carry the whole-hearted approval of the people generally.

Butter Rationing Is Long Overdue

RATIONING of butter on the basis of one-half pound per person has become effective in Canada and there are predictions that similar action will follow in the United States. A new government order, effective February 1, is expected to set aside about 510,000,000 pounds this year for war requirements, leaving about 1,190,000,000 pounds for civilians. Secretary Wickard says the curtailment would permit about thirteen pounds of butter for each civilian as against an average of sixteen pounds last year; but the national dairy industry seems convinced that the nation faces the most serious butter shortage in its history.

Reserve stocks of butter in the storage warehouses of the United States have all but vanished following the "freezing" of huge quantities by the government. A month ago creamery butter holdings were the lowest since 1922 and they have dropped to a lower point since. Year in and year out the December-February period is the low point in milk and butter production throughout the country. Normally there are warehouse stocks to draw upon at this season. Now there is no such store.

Butter is moving into military channels at the rate of 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 pounds a week. A soldier eats forty pounds a year, compared with a seventeen-pound per capita average for the civilian. And of course large supplies of butter are going abroad under the lend-lease program.

Margarine makers are having their troubles, too. Hydrogenated vegetable oils and fats furnish the base for most margarines and stocks of these have been depleted. The drain upon fats and oils in this country may soon have marked repercussions in civilian diets.

Butter and oleomargarine should both be rationed at once. It seems strange, in view of the situation that has developed, that they were not rationed some time since.

Should Not These Murderers Be Tried?

THE PEOPLES of Europe can not forget the barbarity and brutality of the German invaders. That is why none of them will tolerate a soft peace, regardless of pressure from other continents. Nor are the Allied armies disposed to softness.

For instance, a pronouncement from Stalin deserved consideration. "The Hitlerite blackguards," he states, "have made it a rule to torture Soviet war prisoners, to slay them by the hundreds and condemn thousands of them to death by starvation. They outrage and slaughter the civilian population of occupied territories—men and women, children and old folk, our brothers and sisters. They have made it their aim to enslave or exterminate the population of the Ukraine, White Russia, the Baltic states, Moldavia, the Crimea and the Caucasus. Only villains and blackguards bereft of all honor and fallen to the levels of beasts can permit themselves such outrages toward innocent, unarmed people."

"They have covered Europe with gallows and concentration camps. They have introduced a vile system of hostages. They shoot and hang absolutely innocent citizens taken as hostages because some German beast was prevented from violating women or robbing citizens. They have turned Europe into a prison of nations, and this they call the new order in Europe."

"We know who are the men guilty of these outrages. Their names are known to tens of thousands of tormented peoples. Let these butchers know that they will not escape responsibility for their crimes or elude the avenging hand of tormented nations."

The same thoughts—with less moderation—are held by the peoples of Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France and the entire Balkans. Following the First World War, similar threats of reprisal were not carried out, but the provocation is greater this time and many of the Nazi leaders probably will be tried as common murderers.

If, as once reported, there are several men in Germany who resemble Hitler and occasionally pose for him, they will come in handy now to help him do his working.

Those rings the Russians are throwing around the Nazis on the Eastern Front appear more like a noose.

The 'Hardboiled' Mother

By MARSHALL MASLIN

People said that Jenny was hardboiled. They began to say it years ago when Jenny realized that her husband didn't love her any longer. She forgave him six times for his sins and then she quit. Divorced him. Would take no alimony. Said to the judge:

"I can take care of myself and I can take care of my baby. I'll raise him right and I want no father hanging around. Don't give me any alimony. I couldn't get it if you awarded it to me and I don't want it anyway."

So Jenny went her way, working and caring for her baby—just one of those hundreds of women we see in stores and offices who have a baby and no longer a husband. She fed Billy, kept him clean, sent him to school, taught him how to get along, got him a job.

She was fond of the kid but never told him so. People thought she "kicked him around" a little too much; but she loved him more than anything on earth and it was a shock to her when Bill brought home a sweet little person and told her he was going to be married.

The night Bill was married, Jenny went to a show with a middle-aged friend and danced afterwards. You'd never have thought her boy was being married, but she cried into her pillow for hours and called herself "a sentimental old fool."

One month later as she was cooking breakfast Bill walked through the door with his suitcase. He was through! He and Jane should never have married. They weren't suited to each other. They'd had a fight and he had walked out. He was MOVING IN.

And then Jenny blew up. Bill was NOT moving in, he was moving OUT! He was married and he was going back to his wife. He could take his suitcase and go. No, he wasn't staying for breakfast. Some other woman might break up his home, but it wouldn't be his mother. She might have made a fool of herself over a few men in her lifetime but she wasn't going to make a fool of herself over her son. So that was that—and Bill walked out—and Bill stayed married.

And Jenny went into her coffee—but she had "done her stuff," and what else can a woman do?

Statistics Fail To Heat Homes, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Solid Fuelist Harold Ickes announced everyone should convert to coal, even though there is a minor shortage in New England. People are just refusing to do so because it is an "inconvenience," he said.

Paul Mallon

"Well, Washington is not New England, so I decided to try it again. Six months ago, no furnaces or grates were available. Today my oil dealer, who also handles coal and furnaces, said:

"Fine. I have just the furnace for you. It will cost $200."

Now $200 is something more than an inconvenience to me, but not as much inconvenience as my inability to get oil here, adequate oil coupons, or oil deliveries now at a time when the government daily announces (erroneously) plenty of oil is available.

I had finally obtained 300 gallons shortly after my furnace went out last night. The air line from the tank to the burner thus became locked with air and I had to call my furnace repairman.

Repairman Rushed

This in itself proved to be more than a minor inconvenience as the repairman was so flooded with similar calls for help that he left his telephone off the hook as a matter of necessity for half a day and does this regularly every day.

But I finally got the furnace going again today and went in to see the dealer about conversion, carrying my 2,200 gallons of oil coupons with me to pay up for the oil used so far this winter, the same having been allotted to me under the complicated formula of Mr. Leon Henderson's bright young men, who proved themselves to be such damned fools that they figured only the floor space of every house instead of the cubic footage (heating space of the ceiling) in making oil allocations.

The dealer took half my coupons, 1175 to be exact, saying I had already used them so far this winter. As the winter had hardly begun in this section, I could see I can't get through on oil.

So I decided to suffer the $200 inconvenience, on Mr. Ickes' advice and told the dealer I could order the furnace.

Installation Uncertain

"Well $200 is the price without installation," he said, "and I can't tell you when I could get it installed because we have no help."

"But if I once get it installed, can I get all the coal I want?"

"No," he replied, "You see the coal miners are still working a five-day week, seven hours a day thirty-five hours a week. I have more than 100 orders right here (and he showed them) for nut coal."

"They say the miners are going to add seven more hours a week, making forty-two in the anthracite mines, beginning this week, but that won't fill my orders, and I can't make any promises."

I immediately asked why in the name-of-bureaucracy, should anyone then convert to coal.

"That's what I say," broke in a nearby Army officer just back from abroad. "Those blankety blank government officials over there (and he pointed in the general direction of OPA and Mr. Ickes) cut me fifty percent from last year's mild winter for the hardest winter yet."

"I have got to go away again to fight this war and leave an 86-year-old mother-in-law and two children with my wife to struggle through this winter fuel mess."

Bad Propaganda

"The government is just putting out propaganda on this stuff, and it is the worst kind of propaganda from the standpoint of domestic morale."

"I makes me boiling mad, but I can't even get in to see the ration board to get enough coupons and now I can't get the oil for the coupons I have, and, on my pay, I would be a fool to convert to coal, especially when I can't get coal either."

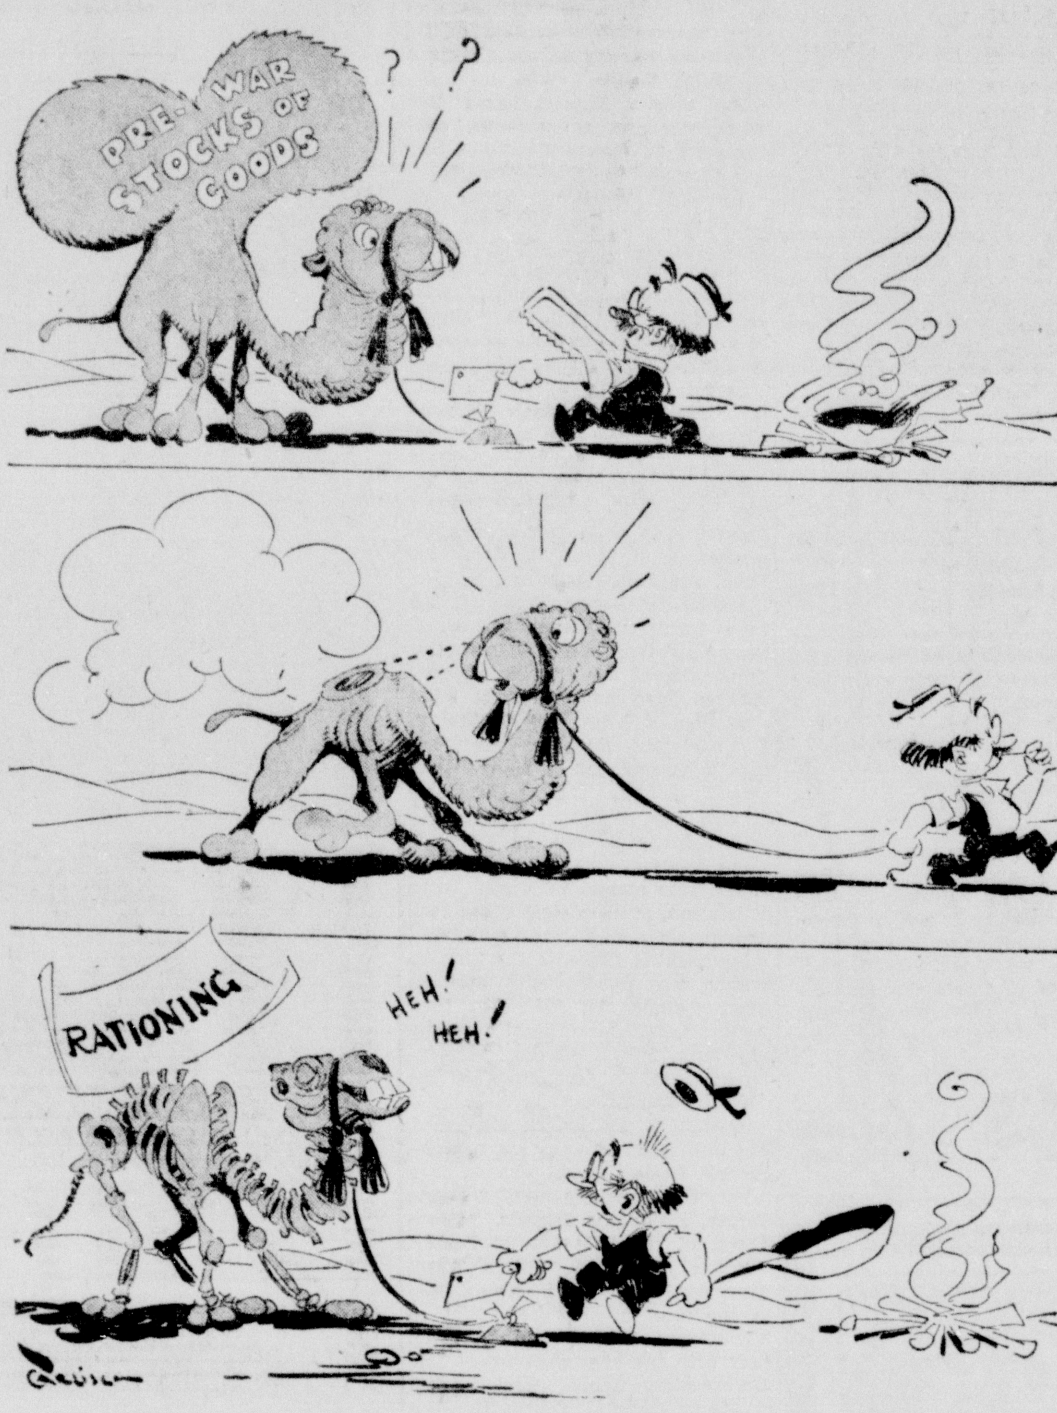

While the bureaucrats here have been daily announcing that dealers in this locality all have sufficient oil, my dealer told me he has been

SEES LITTLE GAS HOPE

Petroleum Administrator Harold C. Ickes is shown in Washington as he spoke to a Senate committee investigating the petroleum shortage along the eastern seaboard. He said the East would remain on a "hand to mouth" basis. He added that there was little hope for a relaxation of gasoline rationing.

Congress, in Serious Mood, Is Expected To Probe Failures in War Management

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Congress is back, in serious mood and with an apparent determination to clear every obstacle that interferes with the winning of the war.

Members are aware of the feeling in their districts—they have had ample opportunity to weigh public sentiment in their respective communities. The consensus is that the people believe Washington has failed to understand the war spirit of the people and has insisted on allowing incompetent men to stay in office in high administrative posts.

There is a certain deference to the president noticeable on the Democratic side, but no such tendency to gloss over the executive's mistakes among the Republicans. In fact, there is a distinct inclination to investigate the use of public funds and the use of public power by executive agencies—for the very simple purpose of demonstrating that there has been both carelessness and inefficiency despite all the exhortations to the people to help win the war.

Vital Facts Hidden
Congress doubtless will authorize a number of investigations to get the facts. The censorship has, to be sure, covered up many important matters that otherwise would be revealed to public view. There has been relatively little misuse of censorship to hide inefficiency as such, but it always happens that when the press is denied information, the people as a whole are prevented from applying their influence to the correction of obvious mistakes.

Thus a check of all public statements issued with the actual production records in 1940 and 1941—now old stuff so far as the enemy is concerned—might disclose that the people were actually misled concerning the nature of our armament. Likewise, an inquiry into the reasons for the delays in handling the work stoppages that caused so much loss of momentum in 1940 and 1941 would reveal what the administration's repeated requests that Congress squelch all restrictive legislation on strikes in 1940 and 1941 cost the American people a considerable amount of armament that today would come in handy in the Pacific or on the North African front.

"It is felt," says the Alliance, "that more and more the tendency is to use the techniques of the European countries while ignoring our own traditions and beliefs—the very principles our men are dying to save."

Which is all very well except that our enemies view it differently. And if we don't fight, at home and on the battlefield, every available minute, those same enemies will destroy our traditions and render our beliefs and principles worthless.

And despite essential war activities on the Sabbath, the war has increased church attendance and strengthened the religious ties of the people.

Incidentally, we failed to use one Sunday to such an extent as might arouse the highest praise from the Lord's Day Alliance. That Sunday was on Dec. 7, 1941—Pearl Harbor Day. We used it so little—and the Japs used it so effectively—that we came within an ace of never having another chance to observe a Christian Sunday.

Another Barrier

The fact that lend-lease supplies have been secretly distributed was a barrier to an understanding of how American production has been allocated, but what happened in 1940 and 1941 may have a bearing on whether the United States has a harder job today to win the war in the Pacific than might otherwise be the case.

In every democratic country the people have a right to know what their government is doing with the money spent, and to date there has been no detailed inquiry into the use of the funds allotted for war or measures "short of war."

None of these investigations should in any way interfere with the operation of the war itself, and it is quite likely that all the data can be furnished without bothering the officers in command of the high chiefs of the civilian production side. Certainly the existence of a war has not prevented the administration from carrying on lawsuits based on happenings of many years ago, and the argument against discontinuing such suits is that they really take up the time of only a few in the companies concerned.

Easy To Furnish

The governmental officers who have charge of the statistical data and those who have made the records can easily furnish to Congress more detailed reports on what has been done with the vast sums of money appropriated by the national legislature. If the expenditures have been justified by subsequent events, the administration should be particularly glad to have the record examined. If many errors have been committed, it is logical to suppose that the inquiries will result in an avoidance of those same errors, especially if this is to be a long war.

The view that the war may last from two to three years more is beginning to be held by many well-informed persons in the nation's capital. The rosy estimates and optimistic statements, concerning our armament have led the people to expect an early victory, but the problems of tonnage and the maldistribution of materials, together with the intensified submarine activity of the enemy, make it necessary to revise all previous estimates.

Japs Entrenched

Japan has entrenched herself in the Pacific, because the United States did not prepare in 1940 and 1941 a navy big enough or an air force powerful enough to do the job facing it in 1942. Germany still has kept the United States and Britain from landing on the coast of Europe, notwithstanding the fact that Britain and America possess superior sea and air power.

If the war is not to be even further prolonged beyond necessity, further study of the mistakes of the past would seem to be in order. (Reproduction rights reserved)

A Phrase Gets Monotonous

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

Increasingly these days we find ourselves annoyed and out of patience with a strange administrative propensity for announcing some wartime restriction and taking advantage of the occasion to sermonize the public. There was our state auditor, for example, who clamped down the other day on requisitions for out-of-state travel for college athletic teams, which was all right. Then, he felt called upon to append, in a pious tone, that New Deal cliché, "A lot of people don't know there's a war going on."

Just where, we wonder, has Mr. Sims been keeping himself? Was he around when the war victory bond drive went over the top? Is there no one in his wide acquaintance who has not scanned a casualty list and found thereon a dear and familiar name? Hasn't he shared with at least a few of us some doubt, but about our willingness, but our ability to meet next year's tax bill along with all the extraordinary expenses of the administration he represents?

We don't get it, as they say. We don't understand and certainly we do not relish this over-indulgence of our elected officials in the luxury of a homily to the people. As we have always understood it, it is the people who lecture their public officials.

Those contemplated post-war trials, then, are wasted while thinking about.

There won't be anyone worth thinking about to convict and execute.

Axis Leaders May Be Eliminated Before Trials

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—United Nations organizers of an international criminal court, to try the Axis leaders after the war, might as well be occupying their minds with something more practical.

All the best reckoning is that there won't be, at that stage of the game, any worthwhile Axis-lies left to try.

Charles P. Stewart

Doubtless there'll be some underlings, in the Himmler, Goebbels and Goering class, to be attended to, but the best betting is that the Fuehrer and Duce supply will be conspicuous by its absence.

Little Chance of Escape

Perhaps it's natural in the proposed court's organizers to want to guard against the post-war escape of such birds as Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini at the conflict's end, as Kaiser Wilhelm "slipped from under" last time. However, there isn't a chance of it.

Kaiser Bill took advantage of a then unprecedented situation. His scout into Holland hadn't been anticipated. Adolf's and Benito's attempted escapes from vengeance are looked for now. In fact, they won't try it. They won't have the chance, as Bill did. Catching all hands by surprise, he had his getaway already accomplished by the time it was realized that he was planning one.

Adolf and Benito will find plenty of watchers on the exit side of the rathole before they can attempt to squeak, outwardly bound, through it.

Few Neutrals Now

Besides, in the nineteen-teens there still remained a bit of neutral territory for fleeing Wilhelm to skycrook into, and scarcely anything neutral is left today.

Apprehending Bill would have involved extradition proceedings, and the Dutch, in that era, might have balked at recognizing an Allied warrant. It could have been enforced against them certainly, but it would have been unpleasant. It was in the Netherlands, then, that Bill dug in and got away with it.

As of the present writing, I'm confident that the Low Countries would comply readily with the merest democratic request for the surrender of a fugitive like Herr Hitler, to be "tried and hanged," as recommended by David Lloyd George in Bill's case. The only difficulty might be that they'd insist on doing their own trying and hanging.

I don't believe, though, that Adolf will get so far as to escape. My notion is that Germany itself will fix him in the meantime.

It may rebel or it may choose assassination, which it's considerably addicted to. A run of bad luck will finish him at home, it's a good gamble.

It's Germanly characteristic.

Undertaker Will Get Him

It also is Germanly characteristic for a German to extinguish himself in that sort of an emergency. To be sure, Adolf's an Austrian rather than a 100 per cent German, but he's Germanly mainly. My surmise is that he won't be available for anybody but an undertaker, before the hour arrives for an international court to put him on trial.

Italians are less suicidal than Teutons.

So possibly Benito will be more unaccommodating, in disposing of his problem at the proper instant, than is to be hoped for from Adolf.

Still, Italy's solution is likely to be a bit slower to dispose of than Germany's, at the crux of the situation. At rebellion and assassination the Italian folk are traditional experts. If Benito delays, his home folk can reasonably be depended upon to look after him personally. They didn't want to go into this thing in the first place. Bennie won't be TRIED; he'll be looked after preliminarily.

Tojo Colorless

Now we get down to Jap ruler-ship.

Nominal Emperor Hirohito, it's safe to say, had no more to do with his country's participation in this war than I did.

His military class bossed the job. Premier Tojo corresponds, to a certain extent, to Adolf and Benito, but there wouldn't be much fun in trying and executing even Tojo. There isn't enough personality about him.

Those contemplated post-war trials, then, are wasted while thinking about.

There won't be anyone worth thinking about to convict and execute.

Embattled Love

BY LORENA CARLETON

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

RESTWICK CARNES' first feeling when Society Sal tripped him, sending him tumbling to the floor, was angry humiliation. His next one was a childish hurt that this white-haired woman, of whom he was so fond, should do such a thing to him.

The latter feeling came out in words. "Sal, what made you do that? We've been friends for years."

"Yes, I know. And only now I've learned you're not real bright."

The man's lips disappeared into a hard line and he tightened both hands into fists to control his temper. "I'll admit my wife is beautiful, Sal, but don't be misled by that pretty face. Abby has been taken in by it. Don't you be such a sap. Believe me, Sal, I know what I'm doing."

"Look, Wutty, I know crows pretty well." Her next remark stopped the unkind one forming on his face. "You are right, dear. You're thinking I should, being one myself."

The man evaded. "I wasn't thinking any such thing."

"Yes, you were. It showed all over your face." All of a sudden Sal was harsh again. And impatient. "I'll make a long story short so you can get to your date and I can open my house to other customers."

That scorned word had slipped out in the intensity of her speech.

"Guests, Sal, dear," Restwick Carnes III reached over and squeezed the outlaw woman's hand.

She smiled. "I knew Paige's father well, Wutty. As a GUEST. He was a wonderful man and a rich one. He and Paige lived on one of those tremendous Texas ranches. Acres and acres filled with long-horn cattle. Lots of cowboys, foremen, little shacks tucked away from the big ranch house in various spots where they could spend the night when inspecting the ranch."

"And a bookkeeper! A man who had done well for himself toying with the books, and who would have done still better with Paige's father out of the way. So he put him out of the way. They went quail hunting. A friendly vacation for just the two of them." Sal paused for an introspective remark. "I have to wonder how a person could be such a dope. But when a person is too good he often is a dope. Anyway," she resumed, "they went."

"The bookkeeper had planned it so they would be in one of the cabins for the night. Absolutely alone. Paige happened to be hunting herself in that vicinity. She had no idea the men were there. When she heard the shot, she was startled but not afraid. However, for some reason she clamped her hand over her horse's mouth. When he was calm she decided she'd better let the hunters know she was nearby."

"When she saw her father sagging against the fence she knew he was hurt. An accident, she figured. Then right away she knew her father was not only hurt, but that he was dead. And it was no accident, for the bookkeeper had put down his own gun and was fitting Mr. Shelton's into his own hands. He was using that camouflage to make it appear that the man had not put down his gun to crawl through the fence, but that he had accidentally shot himself because of that carelessness. A stupid hunting accident that happens several times each season.

"When Paige knew that her father was dead, that there was nothing to do to help him, she managed to hold herself motionless, hidden by the desert bushes at the corner of the shack. She made herself stand there and let that man put clamping hands about her father's still hands, so that the shotgun was pointed toward her father's chest.

"Then when the bookkeeper had no weapon, just when he was ready to wipe off any stray fingerprints of his own from her father's gun, Paige addressed him. He hadn't a chance. She didn't give him one. She just said, 'Don't try to get your gun. I won't let you. I just want you to look at me so you'll know who is killing you.' And so she killed him.

"His prints were on her father's gun. The concealed losses in the books were made apparent. His reputation on previous jobs came out. Then, too, there was the defense angle, because if she had not killed him he certainly would have killed her. All those things saved her. I imagine we all would have acted pretty much the same, Wutty."

She reached for the wine bottle beside her. The cork was topped by a tiny barrel out of which two tiny Dresden China legs were showing, as if an unfortunate girl were caught in a rain barrel.

"I've talked so much the dust is floating on my tongue." Then Sal, who prided herself on dainty gestures, tipped the bottle and drank from it.

Restwick Carnes III gave her one of his smiles, one of those rare, rare ones that could be so magically attractive. "Guess I'd better be on my way, Sal." He drank the rest of his Scotch, ignored while the woman had been talking. "I have to have a few words with Eugenia."

The black chiffon gown Eugenia was wearing was most becoming to her blond beauty. As Abby had stressed that day in the Surf Bar, she did not wear jewels. But tonight her long blond hair shone brightly as a jewel. Also her fingernails. And her teeth and eyes. However, those lovely brown eyes did lose a bit of their sparkle when they saw Rusty's face.

"Darling," she put her hand on his and repeated gently, "Darling. You're not tight, are you?"

"There's Choppo?"

"In his room, of course."

"Is he all right?"

"Yes." The girl frowned, then made a gesture of martyrdom. "I'll admit he was nervous and wriggly throughout the picture and also a bit rude to me—" She smiled. "But I'll win him over, Rusty."

The man did not respond to that sweet, though synthetic maternal pose. He led her to select a lei for the evening. She took one of white tuberoses, which she handed to Rusty to put on her. He was so intent on his own thoughts that he had not made the offer himself.

"Eugenia," he asked, when they were on the dance terrace with drinks before them, "why did you make me thin? Paige was some vile murderer when actually no one could have blamed her?"

"I didn't make you think that."

"She was acquitted."

"Of course, dear." The girl put soft fingers on the man's white sleeve. "They don't allow those who aren't to run round free." "Oh, Lord, what has happened," the girl was demanding of herself. "Who has been talking? Quick consolation followed the thoughts. Paige was gone. Nothing actually could go wrong now. Eugenia began speaking slowly. "It's a horrible thing to say, Rusty, but I think Paige wouldn't mind committing another murder. I think she might even like it."

"Don't talk like an idiot, Eugenia!"

"But she told me—" the blond girl was speaking faster now—"that day she threatened me, that she was never happy in her life than when her victim looked up and realized she intended to kill him. She said she liked emptying her shotgun into him, that she was glad she'd used only on shell for hunting so that she could use the rest on him." She stole a glance at the man and saw her tory was carrying weight. "Oh, Rusty, my love," she cried, "are we going to be separated again?"

"No. Don't be absurd. Simply heard things that made me think I'd misjudged her."

"Not you, Rusty. You're so generous." Again she wondered who could have talked. Not even Abby had been able to make him listen. "Dear, persons like Paige are just different from us. That's all."

"Yes, I guess you're right." A quick smile rolled over his face. "Want to hear a supreme joke? Sal said you were a crook."

The breath from her nostrils was so rasping that Eugenia fared Rusty might notice it. Then she laughed, harder to match Rusty's laughter that was growing. He moved a bit to one side so a wafer could put a fruit cocktail of fresh pineapple and papaya cubes before her.

"Isn't that a good one?" shrieked Rusty.

"Yes." She stopped laughing, bent her head to his hand on his table, and kissed the back of it. "You're so sweet."

On Sunday morning when Abby awoke she went out on the lawn, gazed down at the water, and called to Paige, "We're going faster than usual."

Out of sleepy eyes the girl watched Abby dress quickly and go out. Immediately she was back. "Hey, something is cooking. They are taking down the slot machines and closing the bar."

Paige was frowning as she twisted the knobs of the radio. "I can't get anything on it." She turned to face her friend. "Well, don't stand there! You know every one on this ship from busboy to captain. Go snooping!"

Abby went, and in less than five minutes walked back to the suite. Catapulted, rather, for face, beneath its expensive powder base, was the color of freckles.

"My God, Paige," she cried hoarsely, "the Japs are bombing Honolulu!"

Hearing by Bone Conduction Is Termed Helpful, Harmless System by Doctor

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I am in receipt of a letter from a lady who has been deaf for some time and has been using a bone conduction hearing aid. She calls my attention to a situation which has disturbed her and which may disturb others. She feels that it would be desirable to give as much publicity as possible to the situation so that others might not be disturbed in the same way.

She tells me that she has successfully worn a bone conduction hearing aid which gives her hearing so nearly normal that she is able to hold a position and to do feature writing without ever having had to reveal the fact that she wears such an instrument.

In shopping for a new instrument lately, she was told by several people that in wearing a bone conduction instrument she was not using the hearing that she had left. "In the exact words of some of these people, she was 'letting her hearing die.' They told her that only by putting an ear piece inside the ear would the hearing be "exercised."

I have required of a number of ear specialists and have been told that this idea is entirely without foundation. The patients who have deafness which is overcome by a bone conduction apparatus probably have, in most cases, a hardening of the small bones of the middle ear and the air conduction apparatus does not soften these up so that good hearing is possible.

Not Scientifically True

To say that the bone conduction aid "lets the hearing die" makes no scientific sense, because the hearing lies in the auditory nerve and the apparatus of hearing which is in the temporal bone of the skull, is stimulated just as well by a bone conduction apparatus as by an air conduction apparatus and in any event does not "die," no matter what the patient does.

The proper method of fitting a patient with a hearing aid is to test out both bone conduction and air conduction with an audiometer and find out which form of apparatus gives the greatest amount of aid and comfort. In most instances the bone conduction apparatus will do this and it would be very silly for anyone to use an air conduction aid if the bone conduction aid gave a better hearing range.

My correspondent says that most of the salesmen who tried to persuade her to use an air conduction apparatus in preference to the bone conduction aid did not give her any test whatever to see whether she had good bone conduction or not. This in itself indicates that their advice is unreliable, and anyone who is in the market for an instrument should be suspicious of advice which is not preceded by a careful test of both air and bone conduction.

Questions and Answers

A. B. C.—Should a young woman with thyroid deficiency risk pregnancy? Will shots correct this trouble?

Answer: If the thyroid deficiency is very great, it is not likely that pregnancy will occur. With a real thyroid deficiency the use of thyroid extract by mouth will rectify the trouble.

B. & O. Veterans, Auxiliary Cancel February Banquet

Walter Seel Is Awarded Past President's Pin at Meeting

The Baltimore and Ohio Veterans and the Ladies Auxiliary at a meeting Wednesday evening decided to dispense with the annual mid-February banquet until a "victory" dinner can be held after the war is over.

Myers G. Light, president of the Veterans, in presenting a past president's pin to Walter Seel, praised his work in the organization last year.

J. C. Bateman, Baltimore, representative of the B. and O. Magazine, in speaking on "After This War, Airplane vs. Railroad," pointed out that the cost of freight by air would be so great and that so many pilots and planes would be required to handle the same amount of freight as a fifty car freight train could haul that it will be impossible for the air lines to compete with the railroads. Passenger travel by rail would undoubtedly be somewhat disrupted, he added.

George Tedrick was elected chaplain of the veterans to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Edward Rice, on Christmas day.

The meeting was the first with the new officers which include, Myers G. Light, president of the Veterans; W. W. Seel, vice president; C. R. McCullough, financial secretary; H. W. Bloss, recording secretary; and G. W. Man and Woman Are Injured in Highway Accident

Truck and Automobile Collide on Slippery National Pike

A man was badly hurt and a woman less seriously when a truck and an automobile crashed together on the slippery National highway in The Narrows at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. The accident happened about 200 yards west of the Lover's Leap service station.

The man is Herbert A. Smith, 34, Valley road, who, his physician said, was "badly hurt." He was badly shocked and is suffering from a probable internal injury, the doctor said. He was admitted to Allegheny hospital.

The woman is Mrs. Russell Goodfellow, 30, LaVale, who suffered from lacerations of her forehead, left knee and right wrist. She was discharged from the hospital after treatment.

According to State Trooper Blair J. Buckel, who investigated, Mrs. Goodfellow was driving toward her home in LaVale from Cumberland when her automobile skidded on the slippery highway and turned around on the road.

Smith, driving a one-and-one-half ton stake body truck, was proceeding toward Cumberland, the officer said. The truck struck Mrs. Goodfellow's car broadside on the right, according to Buckel. Both vehicles came to a stop against the block wall in The Narrows.

Mrs. Goodfellow told the trooper he said, that her car would have crashed against the wall if it had not been struck by the truck.

George Wolf, 629 North Mechanic street, and Thomas P. Wolring, Route 2, took Mrs. Goodfellow and Smith to the hospital.

Both the truck and the automobile were badly damaged. Buckel said, the car being damaged to the extent of $300 and the truck about $200.

Charges have not been entered pending the outcome of Smith's injuries.

Drive To Conserve Building Material Is Ordered by WPB

Intensive Campaign To Save Supplies Will Begin Here Today

An intensive drive to conserve critical construction materials through strict enforcement of Conservation Order L-41 was ordered for eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia by the War Production Board effective today.

Seeks To Plug Leaks
Orville H. Bullitt, WPB regional director said the step was being taken as part of a national drive to plug leaks in the greatly depleted reservoir of construction materials and would be directed against suppliers, builders, architects and owners who are violating the terms of the order.

The regional Compliance Section has been directed to move against all violators. This includes suppliers, builders, architects and owners who have participated in construction violating the order Bullitt said.

Amounts Listed
Under Conservation Order L-41, unauthorized civilian construction over any twelve months must be less than in the following amounts:

Cumberland Man

His mother yesterday told of "Crip" and his companions making their home in a stable outside of the populated areas when the Nazis left their "calling cards."

"That's how George came to grow a Van Dyke beard," Mrs. Wolfe remarked.

"George didn't shave for days and when the hirsute appendage covered his face he decided to evade the barber because the moustache and chin whiskers added a professional touch to his youthful appearance."

When George returned to the states, however, he lost his beard in a barber shop but retained his moustache.

Wolfe paid his last visit to Cumberland on October 16, 1941 when the city was visited by a flood. He was riding a truck containing the "gasogene" equipment and told friends he was on a test tour.

"George hates publicity," Mrs. Wolfe remarked, "and that's why he says very little about his invention."

After being graduated from Allegheny high school eighteen years ago, he attended Blue Ridge college, New Windsor, Md., and later Washington State college on the west coast. For many years he was employed in steel construction work in various parts of the country.

"Crip" has four brothers — J. Donald, manager of the Acme Market, Greene street; Robert, the Personal Finance Company, Baltimore; Clarence, a member of a tank battalion, stationed in England and Henry, in the United States Navy.

Mrs. Thomas G. Breakall, Mrs. William H. Twigg, of this city and Miss Gertrude Wolfe, of Baltimore, W. Va., are sisters.

Parents Should Work To Avert Child Jealousy

Older Children Often Forced To Give Up To Baby of Family

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

As a rule parents will make the older child give up to the baby brother or sister on the assumption that the baby does not know better and that giving up will render the older less selfish. Well, the baby may not know better, but it is the parent's job to teach him gradually to know better and to protect the older child from the "barbarism of the baby" just old enough to toddle. For the older to give up to the younger may have moral values if the older sees it is just. But for the older to give up his own possessions to the baby who probably will destroy them is too much for the older to bear without resentment. Out of such injustice jealousies may be built for a lifetime.

Instead of forcing either child to give up his possession to a brother or sister, persuade him to do so if within reason, and then heartily approve him when he does give up and share.

A Parental Problem
"Dear Mr. Myers:—I am the mother of two girls, one two years the other eight years old. Since the younger child has been a sickly child, we have made the older give in to the whims and fancies of the younger."

"Whatever the older child has the baby wants."

"I wish to know if I am doing right by making the older give in to the younger child or is the younger child too young to be taught that she can't have everything she wants. Please tell me how I can best handle this situation for the betterment of both children. A self-addressed envelope stamped with three cents is enclosed."

Of course, you and I as parents know very well that we all are prone to pamper the sickly child, so we really have to feel sympathetic toward this mother. Also we must have sympathy for the older child.

Often it is the well child who suffers heartaches when she has a sickly baby brother or sister. The mother wonders if her baby is too young to learn No. Pretty old, you and I should say, and every day added to her age will make it harder for her to learn she cannot have her way and will require more patience and persistence of the mother.

As I wrote this mother, I hope she encourages the older child, even pays her to read often to the baby.

that she helps the older cultivate many friends of her own age and properly supervises the baby when they call. So the older child can have her rights.

I have written further on these problems in my "The Modern Parent," in my "Marriage and Parenthood," and in "Building Personality in the Child."

Solving Parent Problems
Q You constantly suggest that if we are to have effective control over the youth in his teens we must have cultivated good controls up to then. Is there any hope if these earlier controls have been missing?

A Yes; there is always hope but the chances are not very good. Victory under such circumstances usually means marked achievement in gaining wisdom and remarkable self-discipline by the parents.

Spaniards were the first explorers of the northwest coast of America.

More Programs Cut Their Time On Radio Chain

Mutual Will Report Madison Square Boxing Event Tonight

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Two more programs which have had an hour on the air are cutting time on Friday night. They are on CBS. One is Kate Smith's show at 8, which hereafter is signing off at 8:30 instead of 8:55. In starting the new arrangement, Kate, whose night series has been running an hour ever since it came on the air years ago, will present as guests Peter Lorre of the screen, Henry Youngman of the comedy and Leonard Sues of the trumpet. Although Kate's sponsor is reducing her time, he is retaining the full hour by putting in the Adventures of the Thin Man at 8:30. This drama formerly was on NBC.

The other reduction, is the twenty-six-week old Caravan, with Lanny Ross at 10. However, it is juggling off only fifteen minutes to make it a forty-five-minute production.

In the period given up at 10:45 is being put a comedy sustainer, Joe and Ethel Turp.

Boxing Back
Boxing is back on MBS at 10. The Madison Square event is a lightweight bout between Bob Montgomery and Chet Rico. Don Dunphy and Bill Corum as usual at the microphone.

The Philadelphia orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, will devote the MBS broadcast at 2:30 to the works of Beethoven. This will be the orchestra's last broadcast until January 29 because of out of town engagements.

Due to the difficulty of reassembling the original cast, plans for the repeat of Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Murder of Lidice" on NBC have been changed. Instead of a live performance as intended, recordings have been dispatched to individual stations of the network for retransmission from them at the scheduled time of 1:30.

Listings by Networks
NBC—10 a. m. Music Room; 11:30 Snow Village; 3:15 p. m. Ma Perkins; 6 Charles Dant orchestra; 8 Lucille Manners concert; 8:30 Information Please; 9 Abe Lyman Waltz Time; 9:30 Plantation Party; 10 People Are Funny quiz.
CBS—12 noon Kate Smith speaks;

BLUE—10:45 a. m. Gene and Glenn; 12:30 p. m. Farm and Home program; 3:30 Between the Bookends; 6:15 The Korn Kobbler; 8:15 Dinah Shore singing; 8:30 Those Good Old Days; 9 Gangbusters; 10 Meet Your Navy; 10:45 Men, Machines and Victory.

MBS—11:15 a. m. Karl Komar's Scrapbook; 12:15 p. m. Bill Hay reading the Bible; 4:25 Affairs of Tom, Dick, Harry; 5:45 Junior Newscaster; 7:30 Halls of Montezuma, marines; 8:30 Cisco Kid, drama; 9 Double or Nothing quiz; 11:30 Music without Words.

Rural Mail Carrier Ends Sirenuous Career

SALEM, Ill. (P)—With 37 years of rural mail carrying to his credit, Arthur S. Parrish, 61, of Marion county, Ill., is retiring.

Parrish has seen the era of horse and buggy mail-carrying go but has used that mode of travel in recent years when roads became bad because of weather.

He has had to swim through creeks, hanging the mail on top of his cart. He has seen drifts so high and weather so cold he had to walk practically all of the 26 miles of his rural route.

Thirty-five of his years were unbroken either by illness or vacation. In the old days, it wasn't unusual for women to ask him to buy them a spool of thread on his next trip or he would get their husbands a plug of tobacco.

Flood Control Work Is Stopped

WPB Revokes Preference Rating Orders Issued to Engineers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (P)—The War Production Board has revoked preference rating orders issued to the corps of engineers for sixty-five flood control and river and harbor projects included in the army's civil works program.

The Office of War Information said the action was in line with the policy to curtail work of non-war nature in order to conserve materials and equipment needed for essential war work.

Among the projects were: District of Columbia: Potomac river (river and harbor project; north side of Washington channel).

Tennessee: Memphis (sections 1, 2, 3, 5, 6 and 7) and Obion river (snagging).

Virginia: Craney Island anchor-harbor project.

Certain work was permitted to continue on nine projects. In each case exceptions were made for construction "solely for purposes of safety or health or to avoid undue damage to or deterioration of materials already incorporated." Among exceptions granted were:

Tennessee: (Memphis (flood control project) (installation of pumping plants for sections 4 and 8).
West Virginia: Bluestone reservoir (flood control project) (complete the permanent work inside the first cofferdam in order to prevent its possible loss.)

He's a Right-Handed Worker but a Left-Handed Drinker

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7 (P)—Municipal Judge George Harris asked the defendant, charged with drunkenness:

"Why don't you go to work?"

"I can't. I hurt my right arm."

"Well, apparently you can still drink," Harris said.

"Certainly judge, I'm a right-handed worker, and a left-handed drinker," was the answer.

"Ten days in jail — to rest your right arm," the judge decreed.

'Perfect Steward' On the High Seas

LONDON (P)—Arthur Smith, a West Indian from Barbados and a former dancer, is known throughout the Royal Navy as the "perfect steward." Officers say he has never spilled a drop of soup or tea, no matter how rough the weather.

Brazil's Carnival A War Casualty

RIO DE JANEIRO (P)—Is the war worth giving up the celebrations usually attendant the Fourth of July, Thanksgiving, Christmas and one's birthday, all combined?

That, plus some of the savor of an Old West rodeo and the sensation of tobogganing four days through Arabian Nights atmosphere, is what the Brazilian is abandoning with the cancellation of his annual carnival.

The announcement is not official as yet. But saner government authorities have decided that the riotous four-day splurge, for which Brazilians save all year for the traditional fling that has made Rio the envy of the fun-loving world, is hardly in keeping with the times.

Cow Serves As Nazi Target

LONDON (P)—Producing the forequarters of a carcass of beef, Arthur Woowrow, a butcher, discovered a live cannon shell, 4½ inches long. The cow had been shot up by a German fighter plane during a recent raid.

Soldiers Beat A Curfew

LINDSBORG, Kas. (P)—Writing home, Pvt. Howard Robinson of the St. Louis union station just late to catch the last train the night have placed him in the Knox, Ky., before his furlough expired.

He found seven other boys in the station who also would be AWOL unless they created their own means of locomotion.

They pooled $150 and at 4 a. m. bought an automobile, gasoline and oil and made it to Fort Knox within 20 minutes to spare.

Furthermore, You Can't Turn This One Off

NASH, Okla. (P)—Now that alarm clocks are scarce, Hugh and Paul Wilson are glad they raised the family cat to want out promptly at 6:30 every morning. The Wilson clock quit running recently and they were unable to purchase another one. But Kit, the cat, jumps on the bed at the same time and awakens the Wilsons so that they can let him out on schedule.

A South Carolina 'Dictator' Gave Presidents War Power

Editor's Note: The wartime powers of the president now under question were written into the constitution by a man long forgotten, John Rutledge. Richard Barry, newsman, novelist and author of the new biography, "Mr. Rutledge of South Carolina," just published by Duell, Sloan and Pearce, discusses these powers here and the man who conceived them.

By RICHARD BARRY
Written for AP Features

The current debate over the president's proposal for further extension of his wartime powers is by no means the first such debate, nor is it likely to be the last. The same debate occurred in the Wilson administration and before that when Lincoln took affairs into his own hands.

The president in wartime can Richard Barry do practically what he pleases. The powers-of-the-president clause is so written that, without violating the written covenant, any Chief Executive restrained only by his conscience and his political sense of expediency.

This is so because of one of the most remarkable men the country has known, but an "eagle forgotten," John Rutledge of South Carolina.

The powers - of - the - president clause in the Constitution is in a very real sense the lengthened shadow of John Rutledge and his rich, complex and creative experience as a wartime executive in South Carolina where he was virtual dictator and the first president of the first republic in America, the Republic of South Carolina.

This is how it happened: Rutledge was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention from South Carolina in 1787 and was chosen chairman of the drafting committee. He assigned the preparation of the first draft of the Constitution to Edmund Randolph, former governor of Virginia, who had worked with James Madison on his plan for a constitution.

Randolph reported back with an executive clause severely limiting the presidential power at all times. It was not the clause John Rutledge thought should bind a president in wartime, so he boldly struck it out and inserted the succinct words now in the Constitution. These designated the president "Commander-in-Chief of the land and naval forces of the union, and the militia of the several states."

And Rutledge went a step further, inserting a clause which has yet never been tested giving the president power over congress "in case of disagreement to adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper."

So Rutledge was the presidential pioneer. And yet he so wrote the president's wartime powers into the Constitution that always there would be a moral and political check.

That check is today what it was then—whatever the American people want it to be.

Many Gasoline
Spotters Gather
Data for ActionPassenger Cars Vanish
from Parts of the Eastern Seaboard

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—The passenger automobile was a thing to be started at today on streets and highways anywhere along the eastern seaboard.

And the persons doing most of the looking were doing it officially, to take down license numbers for later check to see if the drivers had legitimate reason for using their cars in face of the Office of Price Administration order that all pleasure motoring stop as a gasoline-saving measure.

There were no reports from any of the seventeen affected states and the District of Columbia of arrests being made of drivers of passenger cars, but in every area the spotters were busy, gathering data for possible later action.

Confusion Reported

Then, too, there was some confusion in interpreting the order, which became effective at noon today. For example, Sylvain Joseph, OPA regional director in New York, changed his mind about sick calls by auto being on the eligible list.

The OPA from Washington helped clarify the order hitting the A, B and C gasoline ration card holders, with an official interpretation late this afternoon.

Essential shopping, visits to physicians, attending church, attending funerals, going to business or professional meetings, or to meet an emergency "involving a threat to life, health or property" were said to be eligible for automobile use.

Here's the Bad News

But, it further declared: "No person to whom a basic ration has been issued may use or permit the use of such ration for any driving in the gasoline shortage area other than family or personal necessity driving for which no adequate alternative means of transportation are available, or occupational driving, or driving by naval or military personnel on leave or furlough for the purpose of visiting relatives or making social calls; provided that such leave or furlough is evidenced by leave provisions in travel or transfer orders, or by liberty cards, leave papers, furlough certificates, letters or special orders signed by the commanding officer."

Absence of passenger cars from the streets was noticeable in various cities from Maine to Florida, a checkup disclosed.

Baltimore Food Quota
Will Be Increased

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7 (AP)—The government's move to dispel temporary food shortages, especially in defense areas, was viewed today by the state Office of Price Administration as a probable solution to Baltimore's food problem.

The government announced that it planned to remove shortages in meats, butter, eggs and other essential foods by creating state and area committees, which will study needs and make requisitions.

State OPA Director Leo H. McCormick said delegations had visited Washington several times seeking remedial action. He pointed out that Baltimore has increased between fourteen and fifteen per cent in population, and that there has been no proportionate increase in quotas to handle the larger food demand.

The rapid growth of the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant here was cited by McCormick as the cause of food shortages and the lack of proper and adequate housing facilities.

STAR IN YANKEE DOODLE DANDY

"Over There," the song that swept the nation during the First World War, was first introduced at a soldiers' musical revue. Shown above in a re-enactment of that memorable day are Frances Langford and James Cagney, as George M. Cohan, in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," coming to the Strand theater this Friday.

Theaters Today

Cagney To Imitate
Cohen in Manners Only

In "Yankee Doodle Dandy," James Cagney will attempt to resemble

America's famous song and dance man, George M. Cohan, only in mannerisms, briskness of speech, and dancing agility.

No tricks of makeup will be attempted.

In the first place young George M. Cohan and Bing Crosby of eight or nine years ago could have passed as twins," Cagney remarks.

In portraying George M. Cohan,

Cagney in great degree will be following the precept, "Be yourself." Jimmy never has written a hit musical, an "Over There," nor has he ever accumulated well up around the million dollar mark as a play producer. But he literally hoofed his way up through show business the hard way, has clung passionately to family ties every step of the climb, and definitely is possessed of Cohan's electric personality.

The picture opens at the Strand today.

"Reunion in France" Is Thrilling Story

Teamed for the first time with Philip Dorn who played in "Escape," "Underground" and "Random Harvest," and John Wayne Joan Crawford flashes across the screen in M-G-M's impressive "Reunion in France," now at the Maryland.

"Reunion in France" provides Miss Crawford with one of the most dramatic roles of her career. She is seen as a carefree French girl who discovers that her fiancé, Dorn, is apparently one of the clique whose Nazi tendencies led to the fall of her country.

Ann Stewart In New Film Discovery

Born in Berlin, Germany of a director father and opera singer mother, it was foreordained that Anna Marie Schunzel would some day take up acting.

The blue-eyed, ash-blond, 118-pound, five-foot-five Ann is now seen in "The Valley of Hunted Men," at the Embassy co-starring Tom Tyler, Bob Steele and Jimmie Dodd.

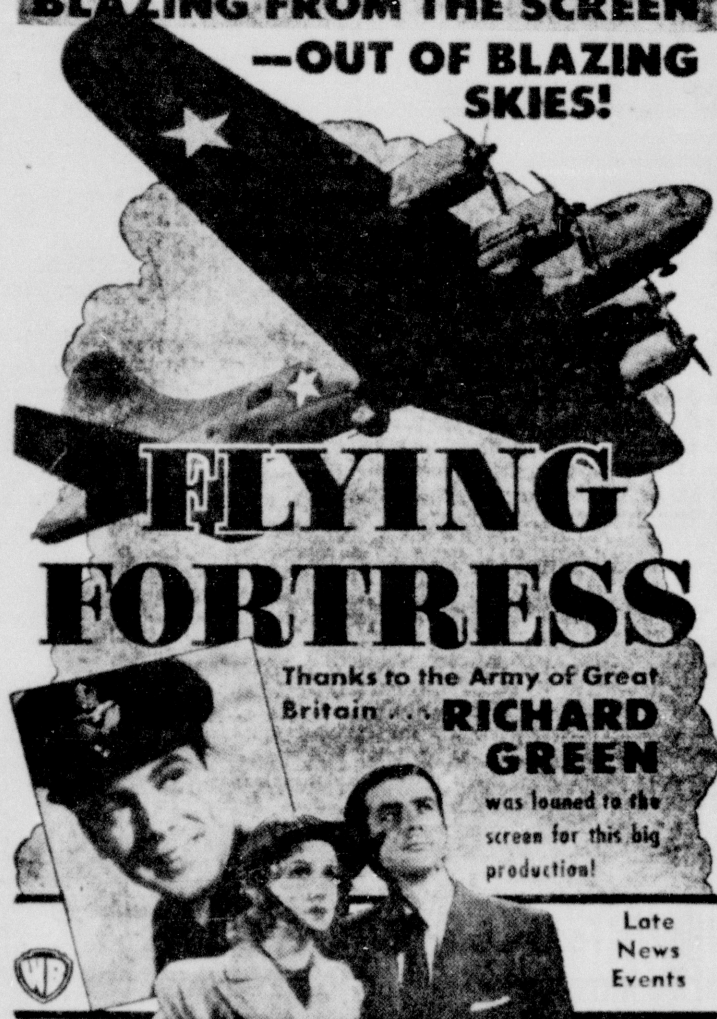

Army Film, Western Open at Garden

Two excellent pictures comprise the double feature at the Garden today. "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" is a comedy about army life. Jackie Gleason, Jack Durant and Florence Rice are starred.

"Vengeance of the West," completes the program. Bill Elliott, Tex Ritter and Adele Mara are starred. Another chapter of "Junior G-Men of the Air" will be shown.

Great Concrete Barges Built To Help Alleviate Fuel Shortages in U. S.

Concrete No. 1

Pouring main deck

General view of concrete ship under construction

By HAROLD KEEN
Central Press Correspondent
NATIONAL CITY, Cal., Jan. 7.—As the nation struggles to conquer its complex transportation difficulties, a shipyard in this southwesternmost corner of the United States has just "unveiled" a Maritime Commission ace-in-the-hole. It's the first of 100 giant barges, shaped like conventional tankers, capable of carrying 50,000 barrels of liquid fuel, built with 40 per cent less steel than ordinary vessels, and not subject to machinery bottlenecks of self-propelled ships. Nothing like it has yet been seen on the high seas flying the American flag, for this 14,000-ton, 375-foot craft is fabricated mostly of concrete.

FALSE TEETH

That Loosen
Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Designated simply Concrete No. 1 at its launching from a dock of the recently organized Concrete Ship Constructors' yard here, the tremendous barge inaugurated a new area in U. S. shipbuilding—one that in a measure repeats history.

Tried Once Before

During World War I and also in San Diego harbor, a small number of self-propelled concrete freighters were built for the government, but they were completed too late to establish their value in the stress of war-time commerce.

Today, however, as construction of concrete barges nears the mass production stage, this new type of cargo carrier is expected to help overcome the transportation limitations which have led to fuel shortages in many parts of the country. The National City yard, pace-setter in the experimental phase requiring almost six months from keel-laying to launching, is one of five contractors applying American ingenuity to a revolutionary departure in shipbuilding technique.

Not satisfied with its trail-blazing record, the Concrete Ship Constructors, a joint enterprise of two Los Angeles contracting concerns, neither of which had previous shipbuilding experience, has trimmed its production schedule on succeeding vessels to two months.

Much Handwork

Concrete ships are erected, not primarily by shipwrights, but by ordinary building tradesmen—carpenters, laborers, cement finishers and steelworkers. Although the assembly line production principle made famous by Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilding wizard, is employed, an infinite amount of handwork is involved in the preparation of numerous wooden forms into which the concrete is poured to form the hull.

Three pouring operations occur in the course of construction, and hand labor is necessary for uniform spreading of the concrete.

Precious time is saved by fabricating the transverse steel bulkheads in the yard, where welding can be performed on the flat instead of in cramped areas within the dock. Giant cranes put the bulkheads in place and the large sections are welded together.

A network of reinforcing steel forms the ship's skeleton, but tons of this critical material are saved in bulkheads, bottom and sidewalls by use of concrete.

"Concrete today has three times the strength it had in World War I, and is made up of a more scientific proportion of the aggregates," explains C. M. Elliott, executive of the shipyard.

Can Take Strains

"The concrete employed in these new barges must be able to withstand the most severe strains in storms and under full load conditions."

Heavily-powered tugs will tow these great non-propelled tankers between ports. While one is being loaded or unloaded, the tug will be free to tow another similar barge to its destination, thus speeding the flow of gasoline and oil to regions in desperate need of fuel.

The barge will be so fitted as to permit towing of a pair simultaneously.

Launching, as well as construction, of these craft is unique. A hollow concrete gate which dams up the bay while work is under way in the dock is towed away, and water swirls around the hull until it floats.

The entire project, born of a challenge to those responsible for conserving steel in the face of unparalleled transportation demands, is seen as another example of U. S. industry's win-the-war daring and imagination.

RHEUMATISM
CONSTIPATION
WEAK KIDNEYS

For Better Health!

RHEUMATISM. Arthritis is a painful disease. It causes agony and misery. The cause, in general, is acid condition in the blood. The source of the cause often is mineral deficiency in the foods we eat. What is the remedy? For thousands of years, people regarded MINERAL as the best remedy for Rheumatism, Arthritis, Neuralgia, as well as diseases of the Stomach, Bladder and Kidneys. From ancient Greece, Egypt, Rome, China and India, down to the present day, year after year, people rush to the MINERAL SPRINGS to get relief.

THE BEST doctors, the most intelligent people, millionaires and laymen, Kings and Princes when attacked by Rheumatism, Gout, Stomach, Kidney or Bladder trouble, prefer to go to Mineral Springs. In America we have the wonder Mineral Springs in Georgia, patronized by thousands year after year. In France is the Lourdes and Aix Le Bains, and in Greece the very famous Spring of Thronion where, according to the legend, Hercules, the God of Strength and Youth, drank and bathed to rejuvenate to be forever young.

O'Connor Favors Plan To Continue Racing

Plans To Request New Legislation If Necessary

Leaves Actual Solution to Racing Commission and Track Operators

BALTIMORE, Jan. 7 (AP)—The governor of Maryland, endorsing efforts to keep horse racing alive despite the prohibition on pleasure driving, declared today he would go before the newly-convened general assembly if necessary to request needed legislation.

Governor Herbert R. O'Connor, whose state government received a record $1,612,389 from racing during 1942, left the actual solution to the Maryland Racing Commission and the operators of the four major tracks.

While no definite plan has been devised to keep the sport going in Maryland—where approximately one-third of each year is devoted to racing—it was considered probable that the only necessary statutory change would be a striking out of one restriction.

The Maryland law at present provides for 100 days of racing at major tracks, but with no more than thirty days at any one track.

Racing leaders pointed out that the famous Pimlico plant, located within the city limits of Baltimore and easily accessible by trolley, may be able to handle all 100 days.

An alternative was the division of the time with the Laurel track, which lies directly beside the Baltimore and Ohio railroad's Baltimore-Washington tracks. Laurel ordinarily does not conduct a spring meeting, but its plant could be utilized by another association.

It was considered extremely unlikely that either Havre De Grace or Bowie would hold meetings during 1943 because of inaccessibility. The railroad stations are several miles from each and special trains to the race plants are banned.

Chairman Frank Small, Jr., of the Maryland Racing Commission concurred in this opinion, and said no action had been taken yet on the scheduling of racing dates for the four major tracks.

But the final decision rests with those who control Pimlico and Laurel. As Governor O'Connor put it: "It would be foolish to take legislative action if the tracks don't want it."

At least one track, Pimlico, intends to operate unless the situation changes for the worse. President Harry Parr of the Maryland Jockey Club said today "we will continue to operate as long as possible, provided there is no conflict with the war effort."

Montgomery-Rico Bout Is Set for Garden Tonight

New York Athletic Commission Says Winner Will Meet Beau Jack

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—The lightweight flistic follies, a production that has provided this season with its most hilarious laughs and sinister plots, adds another skit of songs and patter in Madison Square tomorrow night with a 15-round punch-party between Bob Montgomery and Chester Rico.

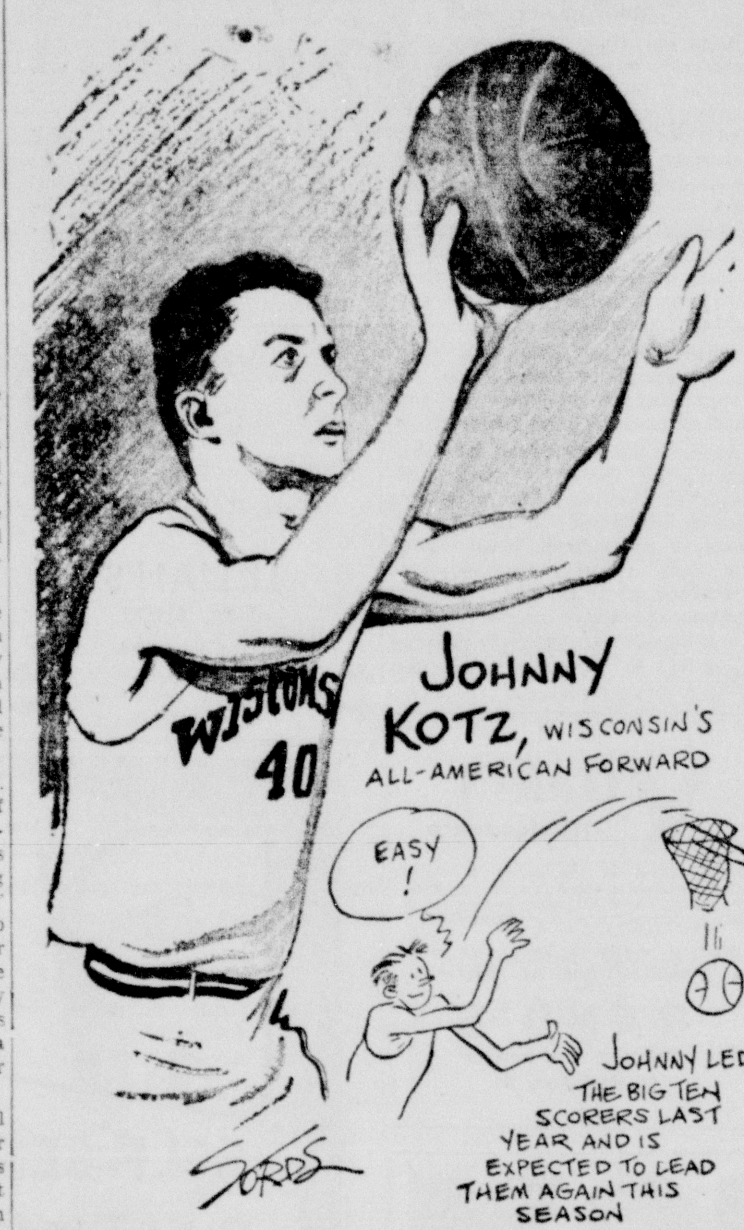

Just how this one fits into the somewhat mumble-jumble pattern to name a successor to Sammy Angott's abdicated 135-pound crown depends on just where you live and which part of the comedy you've applauded up to now.

Around here, Chairman John J. Phelan and his fellow members of the New York State Athletic Commission, who insist their left hands do know what their rights are doing at all times, already have "blessed" Beau Jack with the championship through his recent victory over Tippy Larkin. As a result, the Empire State's august solons say the Montgomery-Rico run-in is simply one of the matches in a tournament to decide a challenger for Jack.

On the other hand, the National Boxing Association, spread out over most of the rest of the nation, is going along on the theory that championships are won and lost in the ring and that there are a dozen or more capable clouters around who should have a crack at the title before it's handed to anyone. So the NBA tabs tomorrow's tussle as one in a nation-wide tournament, the winner of which will be crowned with Angott's bauble.

One way or another tomorrow's shindig adds up to a brawl as close as the buttons on your vest. In fact, the better betting emporiums along Forty-ninth street are having some difficulty splitting the two bumpties and have installed Montgomery a mere 2 to 3 favorite over the slim New Yorker, whose chief claim to fame is that he boasts a draw with a disputed defeat by Beau Jack in two recent outings. This corner strings along with Montgomery's crowding, pressing style and figures Philadelphia Bob to come home in front.

Allegany Trims Frostburg Jayvees

Coach Bill Bowers' Allegany high cagers walloped the Frostburg State Teacher Jayvees last night on their home court by a 34 to 17 score for their second win this week.

The Teachers never had a chance as the Allegany boys slammed the hoops for fifteen twin-pointers and four of thirteen foul tries. Don Beck led the Blue and White cagers with nine points while Sterne, Spangler, Gorman, Lucas, Baker and R. Fuller contributed one or more goals toward the victory. Bowers used practically all his squad during the game.

Nesbit, former Fort Hill player, was high man for the Teachers with three field goals. Oglebay hooped two goals and Williams and Rockwell made one each for the losers. A slim crowd saw the tussle. The lineup:

Pep Will Meet Stolz On January 29

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP)—Lou Viscusi, manager of Willie Pep, the Hartford, Conn., fighter who is recognized in New York as the world featherweight champion, today wired from Tampa, Fla., agreeing to January 29 as the date for a non-title bout with Allie Stolz of Newark.

The scrap, originally scheduled by Promoter Mike Jacobs for Madison Square Garden on January 15, was postponed because Stolz suffered an attack of food poisoning.

Expect To Run Kentucky Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 7 (AP)—Barring further restrictions Churchill Downs expects to run the Kentucky Derby May 1 and hold its regular spring race meet.

In the absence of Col. Matt Winn, president, other officials declined to be quoted by name but they were generally of the opinion that even should the stringent ban on gasoline use be extended to Kentucky it would not prevent the Downs from holding a spring meet.

The track is located within the city limits and street cars pass by its main gates.

Referring to this, one official said:

"Even with motor travel banned, we will stage a successful meeting depending entirely upon street cars. Many fans even could be expected to walk to the track."

TRAINER MAY SHIP WHIRLWAY TO TRACK AT NEW ORLEANS

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 7 (AP)—In spite of the horse racing shutdown in Florida, Whirlaway will go right on racing — if his fond trainer, Ben Jones, has his way.

"That horse is fit and just dying to race," Jones said today. "If it is at all possible, I believe we'll ship him to New Orleans."

"Of course, we must hear from Warren Wright first," he added. Wright, Whirlaway's owner, is traveling in the west.

Jones was stranded at Santa Anita with fifty-nine horses last year when racing was stopped, so he was philosophical about yesterday's shutdown when both Tropical Park and Hialeah decided that the OPA ban on pleasure driving meant no more racing.

"This year," Jones said, "I've got forty-four horses eating up hay and oats."

The Calumet Farm's horses, he said, most likely will remain at Hialeah because of the danger of shipping them from Miami's warm climate to the farm at Lexington, Ky., in the winter.

The Calumet stable force of more than thirty swipes, exercise boys, etc., will be maintained to take care of the forty-three thoroughbreds and two ponies. There are twenty-two baby racers who must be schooled continuously during the winter months, Jones explained.

LaSalle and Fort Hill Fives Clash Tonight

Ban on Pleasure Driving Probably Will Hurl Crowd

Explorers Favored To Open City Title Defense with Victory

One of the smallest crowds to take in an intra-city scholastic basketball contest is expected tonight when the LaSalle High Explorers launch their title defense against the Sentinels from Fort Hill high on the latter's spacious court at 8 o'clock.

Due to the government ban on pleasure driving, the fans who take in tonight's intra-city series opener will either have to walk to the Fort Hill gym or grab a bus. In previous city tussles, parking space near the school was at a premium.

The Explorers, with three hold-over regulars ready to take to the hardwood, will be favored over their cross-town rivals. The boys tutored by Art Slocum will be shooting for their fifth consecutive triumph this season.

Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh's Sentinels opened their season by ringing up victories over Piedmont 41-29, Paw Paw 52-17 and Davis 28-24, but then ran into a snag in the form of an Alumni outfit, bowing 34-30 in an extra period. A 46-22 beating at the hands of Grafton (W. Va.) high followed but earlier this week, the Hilltoppers re-entered the victory column by trimming Paw Paw 43-28 to sweep the series and will go into tonight's tussle sporting a record of four triumphs and two reverses.

Geatz Leads Explorers
LaSalle's chances rest heavily on the pitching arm of George Geatz, who topped city scorers last season. Geatz has been the top scorer in all of the Explorers' games to date, caging seventeen points against each Piedmont and Beall, eleven against Central and eight against Alumni.

Geatz will start at forward along with Ray Schmitz, another holdover first-stringer. Billy Hunt, who has shown great improvement, will probably be at center with the veteran Bobby Stakem and Tommy Ford at the guard positions.

Fort Hill's scoring aces in previous battles proved to be Captain Wally Troutman, O'Brien "Obie" Calhoun and Fred Davis. Troutman was high against Piedmont, Grafton and in the return clash with Paw Paw. Calhoun set the pace against Davis and Paw Paw in the first meeting and Davis led the attack against the Grads.

Davis will pair with Carl Morris at the forwards with Troutman at center and Calhoun and Charley Barnes at the guards. The game will follow a 7 o'clock preliminary between the Fort Hill junior high quint and the LaSalle Tenth Graders. Two officials, Charles "Chick" Imes and Van Roby, will work the main game.

Seven other schoolboy tussles are slated in the district tonight, with all but one to be played in nearby West Virginia towns. Barton, seeking its first victory in three starts, will entertain the Frostdurg State Jayvees in the only non-West Virginia scrap.

Beall Invades Piedmont
Beall of Frostdurg will invade Piedmont for a return tussle. Capon Bridge will appear at Paw Paw. Bruce will travel to Fort Ashby for a return contest. Moorefield will open its Potomac Valley Conference campaign at Franklin. Romney will be host to the Handley High Judges of Winchester, Va., and Petersburg High's Vikings will open at Mathias.

Piedmont topped Beall 36-30 in the previous meeting and will be striving for its seventh victory in nine games. Beall has won one of three contests.

Paw Paw has topped one of four while Bruce, trimmed in five straight clashes, lost to Fort Ashby 28-26 in the earlier meeting for the latter's only triumph in three starts.

Moorefield's Yellow Jackets topped Alumni in their only game to date and Romney turned back an Alumni combination in its lone start. The only contest tomorrow night is the meeting of the Davis High Wildcats and the Keyser High Golden Tornado at Keyser, W. Va.

Sports Fans Share Guilt in Misusing Gasoline Ration

Cars at Rose Bowl Game Was Clincher, Whitney Martin Says

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (P)—Well, if you ask us, the sports fans asked for it. Asked for the ban on all pleasure driving along the eastern seaboard, that is.

The handwriting has been on the wall these many months. It didn't take a code expert to glean from periodic official utterances the fact that the government frowned upon the use of motor cars in attending sports events, yet what happened?

Pictures of race track parking lots showed them jammed until you couldn't squeeze in a bicycle. Regular season football games in some instances prided in whopping attendance, with any heebie-jeebie knowing all the fans didn't come by train or walk.

And what capped it off was the news that 30,000 cars were parked in the vicinity of the Rose Bowl New Year's day. That was the clincher, and it seems like more than a coincidence that the drastic curb followed almost immediately that enlightening information.

West Coast Not Included

The irony of it is that the West coast, where this carnival of pleasure driving was staged, is not included in the new restrictions, and it does seem a little like kicking a dog in the rumble seat when it was the other end that bit you. However, the theory probably is that only lack of opportunity prevented easterners from a like demonstration of gas and tire wasting, an inclination plainly demonstrated by the turf fans.

Furthermore, the gas situation in the East is not to be compared with that in other parts of the country, where it is recognized that the four-gallon "A" card limits is to conserve rubber than fuel. Were that not the reason, you'd have a hard time trying to convince some resident of Oklahoma or Texas that rationing for him was necessary, particularly if he ran out of gas between two oil wells that were spouting so many gallons a minute.

Fans Not Only Offenders
Sports fans, naturally, are not the only offenders in misuse of gasoline. In fact, they probably are in the minority when the thousands upon thousands driving to movies, or bridge games, or club dances and one thing and another daily are considered.

However, they are in the unfortunate position of being the goat in that their offense, if it could be called that, stands out like a sore thumb. A big sports event naturally draws a big crowd, and the accompanying accumulation of cars is more noticeable. The 30,000 at the Rose Bowl, for instance, just shouted for recognition, whereas that many distributed over a wide area for various small events, whether sports or social, would pass unnoticed.

The theory of many motorists still was that as long as they were allowed three or four gallons they could use it as they saw fit, although it has been made clear time and again that the allowance was for essential driving, and not for pleasure.

No More Doubt

Well, there is no more doubt now, as the sports fans along the Eastern Seaboard will realize as they prepare for a snappy game of table tennis or darts in their unheated game rooms.

The blame isn't on any one person, as in theory it would be just as bad to have ten pleasure cars parked outside a movie or football bowl as 10,000, for what is fair for one is fair for all.

But we still think poor judgment has been shown by promoters of big sports events in not discouraging motorized attendance. After all, a gent living in a glass house shouldn't encourage his guests to bring their own racks.

West Virginia Court Event Dates Fixed

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 7. (P)—Secretary J. E. Ewing of the West Virginia High School Athletic Association, said today that scholastic basketball tournament dates this year will conform with those of 1942, with final play at Morgantown on March 26 and 27.

Ewing returned only last night from Parkersburg, where he attended a meeting of the State High School Board of Athletic Appeals which discussed the possibility of earlier dates for 1943 play, Ewing became marooned at Parkersburg by the flood.

The secretary said upon his arrival here that it was found many schools had games scheduled in the

Big Bill and Johnny Poe

Big Bill Edwards' keenest memory always traveled back to a November day in 1899 when Johnny Poe made his famous drop kick against Yale. Yale was leading with time running out.

"Poe had never made a drop kick," Big Bill said a few days before his death, "but we decided to let him try it. We felt that Johnny could do anything, especially in a pinch. I still remember the thrill I got when I saw the ball cross the bar. It is a memory that builds up with the years."

Poe was killed in action with the Black Watch in 1915 during the first World war.

No man ever loved football more than Big Bill Edwards. His last public appearance was at the Touchdown Club dinner just before he left for the hospital. Big Bill was a great football player, a fine sportsman and a grand fellow. Football especially will miss him more than a trifle.

Spring Baseball

If there has been a part of sport badly overdone, the prize goes to the length given to spring training in the major leagues.

This applies especially to the long list of exhibition games played along the route back home.

If owners and managers don't know this, the ballplayers do. Few ballplayers facing a 154-game schedule can handle 35 extra games without going stale. Two weeks' training should be plenty if the ballplayer keeps in fairly good condition through the winter.

I've heard several club owners and managers admit this, but they feel they must string along with the others, largely through alleged publicity values.

Training at home through a shorter period isn't going to hurt the quality of play.

The Case of Ty Cobb
I asked Ty Cobb one year why he had held out so long. "Money had nothing to do with it," he said. "I simply didn't want to wear myself out with too much spring training. Take my season in 1911. I held out that year and finally reported at Terre Haute on April 6. This left me about ten days to get ready. That year I batted 420 and stole 96 bases. I was still fresh and feeling good through the last week, where some of the others had gone stale."

Cobb handled fewer training days than any other big-time ballplayer. This partly accounts for the fact that he was able to move at top speed for 24 years.

Cobb kept in condition by hunting most of the winter. His legs were always ready to give him the transportation he wanted.

If Cobb had reported late in February or early March, season after season, he would have lost at least 4 years from his playing time.

For Cobb only knew how to play the game one way—at top speed.

Exceptions

I'll admit, Cobb was an exception. So was Babe Ruth. One of the all-time sporting marvels is the way Babe Ruth carried his 240-pound system through 20 seasons on a brace of slender ankles.

Each year you had the feeling those thin ankle props were going to crack up, considering the fact that Ruth also averaged at least 30 exhibition games each year.

The Babe weighed 253 pounds the year he collected his 60 home runs, from 15 to 20 pounds over his normal displacement.

"I had enough felt that year to hit 'em a little harder," the Babe tells you. And he also feels certain he could have added a husky batch of extra homers if he hadn't been called on for so much exhibition play.

It has always been my belief that major league seasons start too early and last too long.

The season should be condensed, adding the necessary double-headers to fill out.

In Shape

There is no reason why a ball club can't get in good shape in its home town in three weeks' time.

It might not be quite as sharp the first week of March and it was decided to abolish the March 19-20 tournament dates considered last month at Parkersburg.

Florida's Dog Tracks Stay Open

Some Race Horse Owners Think Racing Can Be Resumed Later

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 7. (P)—Florida's dog tracks experimented tonight with the theory that bettors will find a way to lay their money on the line in spite of a ban on pleasure driving which closed the only two active horse racing plants in the state.

Owners and handlers of 1,200 thoroughbreds shipped here for the Tropical and Hialeah Park meetings found they were stuck in horse raceless Miami for a lengthy period and tightened their belts against a lean winter.

Only one dog track—the Hollywood Kennel Club's oval eighteen miles north of Miami—called off its meeting once the Office of Price Administration put a drastic curb on the use of automobiles.

Others—at Miami, Miami Beach, Jacksonville, West Palm Beach, St. Petersburg, Tampa and Orlando—decided to keep going for a night or two to find out whether patrons would get to the tracks by public conveyances, or by walking. The jal alai fronton here also made the test.

The gloom at Hialeah and Tropical parks was tempered by the unquenchable optimism of horse folk, some of whom still were willing to make long-shot bets that the gasoline situation would ease in time for racing to be resumed here this winter.

There was nothing from the officials of either track to support such wagers.

Stables at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans, the only horse track now running, were reported filled to capacity.
